

Safety made fun

The third annual Child Safety Awareness Day a day-filled about child safety, will be held at Hall Honda, 3516 Virginia Beach Blvd. Saturday, May 20 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Highlights will include Child Safety Seat Checks, KidCare Photo IDs, fingerprinting, bike helmet fittings and information from public safety organizations. For more information call, 625-2518.

Conjuring memories

Old toys conjure up such great memories of happy times gone by. "Memories of Childhood," a new exhibit at the Francis Land House Historic Site and Gardens, will bring back those happy memories. This exhibit is open during regular museum hours through Sept. 3 and is free with museum admission.

The exhibit features toys, games and baby things that were a part of everyday life prior to the age of plastic. A 1925 doll house filled with hand-crafted furniture fills one corner of the exhibit room. Display cases are filled with toys made of metal, porcelain, wood and clay. Copies of childhood photographs of the Francis Land House volunteers, friends and staff cover the walls of the room. Call 431-4000 for information.

Retired Officers

The Retired Officers will sponsor a fun karaoke party at the Breezy Point Officers Club on Friday, May 19 at 3 p.m. Dress is casual. Members and officers nearing retirement are cordially encouraged to attend. RSVP to 464-6799 prior to Tuesday, May 16.

YMCA golf tourney

The Armed Services YMCA will host its fifth annual golf tournament Friday, May 12. This is one of the major fundraisers for the organization, which provides a wide variety of services to the military community. The Four Man Florida Best Ball Tournament will be held at Honey Bee Golf Course.

Registration and lunch is served at noon and at 1:30 p.m. there will be a shotgun start. The price is participating is $75 for civilian and $45 for active duty and retired military.

To register to golf or for additional information about the tournament contact Cathy Howard, executive director, Armed Services YMCA, 363-1884.

Earth Day 2000

The city of Virginia Beach will co-sponsor Earth Day 2000 with the city of Norfolk, the Navy, plus promotional sponsors GoHamp-tonRoads.com, HRT and Tralfax, at Mount Trashmore Park on Sunday from noon until 7 p.m. The 162-acre park, the first landfill park in the world, has helped establish the city of Virginia Beach as an environmentally-concerned community.

Live entertainment, environmental exhibits, interactive displays, crafts, games and food will offer something for every family member and Mount Trashmore is an ideal setting for the event. One of the attractions is the ECO Trail, which provides guests an opportunity to learn about various environmental technologies, activities and efforts within Hampton Roads, across America and around the world.

Preschool program

The YMCA of South Hampton is working with the Virginia Beach and Chesapeake school systems to offer a special preschool program designed to give 4-year-olds a jump-start on the future. The program is open to children who will be 4 on or before Sept. 30 and whose parents have circumstances in their lives preventing them from providing their children with a preschool education.

The Early Discoveries program in Virginia Beach and the Early Adventures program in Chesapeake have been made possible through a grant called the Virginia Preschool Initiative. Call 495-1568 in Virginia Beach and 545-0639 in Chesapeake.

Bike hike

Back Bay National Wildlife Refuge will host a morning bike hike Saturday from 9 a.m. to noon. Join Outdoor Recreation Planner Daffny Jones for this trek. It will take place along the east and west dike trails and will provide excellent opportunities for viewing songbirds and other wildlife active during these hours. Bring your binoculars and bicycles suitable for sandy terrain. Pre-registration is required for this program. For more information and pre-register call, 721-2412. Office hours are 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily. The program will meet at the Visitor Contact Station at Back Bay National Wildlife Refuge.

Mayor proves staying power

Oberndorf elected to fourth term; voters say 'no' to 31st Street hotel/park development

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

Mayor Meyera E. Oberndorf proved her staying power in Tuesday's elections by winning a fourth term as mayor.

Her victory was a close one, garnering approximately 48 percent of the vote against three challengers: Glenn F. "Corey" Corillo, her closest competitor who won approximately 42 percent of the vote; Miguel J. "Mike" Arsuaga, a retired Naval officer who has tried two previous times to capture the seat; and Richard A. "Dick" Jones, a business forms distributor and owner of Brothers Business Forms and Printing his first bid for elected office.

Following her victory, Oberndorf conceded she was tired after a tough campaign fighting a contender backed by the Republican party. She said she had run what is known as a "kitchen" campaign with no strong party behind her against the forces of a powerful Republican machine. City Council elections are supposed to be non-partisan.

Corillo, a communications professor at Virginia Wesleyan College and first-time contender for public office, said that things might have been different if the two other contenders, who conducted low-financed, grass roots types of campaigns, had not drained votes that otherwise would have gone to him.

Corillo's backers, in fact, had tried to talk Arsuaga out of running in the campaign. Arsuaga's campaign was notable by the candidate's placard-bearing promotion through the streets of Virginia Beach.

turned up to vote, although the campaign was one of the most high-contested races in years and the outcome will direct city policies, at least for the next four years.

The major issue in the campaign was council's position on the development of 2 1/2 acres at 31st Street and the Oceanfront.

City dedicates new Cooke Elementary

Bigger, better school opens, but still houses lots of memories

By Jason Norman
Correspondent

In 1915, a free public school opened in Virginia Beach.

Without water and electricity, 110 students gathered to learn the basics of reading, writing and arithmetic. Two years later, the school was named Wiloughby Cooke Elementary School for a gentleman whose love of children and philanthropic efforts made a profound impact upon the education of the area.

Over the next 81 years, students, teachers and administrators came and went, new technology was brought in, and several additions were made to the school.

But, in 1998, the building was demolished to make room for a bigger and better Cooke Elementary. On Sunday, the 89,000-square-foot, two-story building was dedicated by hundreds of students, administrators and alumni.

During the dedication ceremony, students gave speeches concerning the long history of the school itself. One student displayed a replica of a drinking cup provided for each student before the installation of water fountains. Another reported on past principals and other administrators in the school, including school namesake Wiloughby T. Cooke.

PYHO helps spread a little sunshine

Paint effort brightens day for elderly

By Colleen Holmes
Correspondent

Is it truly more blessed to give than to receive? It depends on who you ask.

Volunteers and beneficiaries alike were delighted to participate in Saturday's annual Paint Your Heart Out, a regional effort in which thousands of volunteers join forces to paint the homes of low-income elderly residents.

Despite cloudy skies early that morning, there was a definite sunny attitude as Beach helpers painted, renovated and did yard work. Citywide coordinator Cdr. Frank Decker said the program went very well this year.

"We had a good turnout and no injuries," said Decker, noting that volunteers' safety is a significant concern. "I was particularly happy that the weatherman looked our way."

The volunteer groups that made the event possible included Rotary chapters of Cape Henry, Virginia Beach, Princess Anne and Hampton Roads. Also pitching in were teams from Cox Communications, Navy Medical Clinic at Oceana and the Joint Services Enlisted Association Atlantic Fleet.

The groups completed work on seven houses. By the end of the day all seven houses were freshly painted. In addition, the groups trimmed hedges, pulled up trees, cut grass, recaulked window seals, replaced window panes, and even replaced air conditioning units at one woman's home.

They worked hard but managed to

Teen takes jab at women's boxing

Beach's Heather Stevens ranked number three in growing sport

By Jason Norman
Correspondent

With her hair tied back, wearing sweatpants and a T-shirt, Heather Stevens relaxes at the home of her brother-in-law, Roger Belch.

"People usually don't believe that I'm a boxer," she admits. "When they see boxing gloves in my car, they usually assume that they belong to my brothers or boyfriend. They say things like, 'You're too little and pretty to be a boxer!'"

That's a fair assumption. About 5'5" with an average build, the 19-year-old Virginia Beach resident certainly doesn't have the physical appearance of one who is ranked number three in the nation in Women's Amateur Boxing.

In this case, however, looks are deceiv-ing. Stevens currently holds a 9-4 amateur boxing record, with all of her losses coming by decision (in amateur boxing, there are no knockouts; the fight is stopped quickly if one fighter looks to be in trouble).

The Salem High School graduate trains for about two hours every day. Sometimes she works out at Barnard Park in Norfolk and sometimes at the recreation center in Kempville. But most often, she uses Belch's home gym. In addition to being a member of her family, he's also her boxing coach.

"I used to box for a while until my arm got messed up," says Belch, who once stepped into the ring with Norfolk boxing legend Pernell "Sweetpea" Whitaker in a charity bout.

"About a year ago, Stevens came up to me, and told me she wanted to learn how to box."

"I wanted to show her what it was like

ADVICE TO SAVE MOM'S LIFE

A good combination

May is Stroke Awareness Month, and May 14 is Mother's Day. That's a good combination, according to the American Stroke Association, because it draws attention to a sad fact — stroke kills more than 97,000 women each year.

There's an encouraging side, too: You can help reduce those numbers.

That's why taking the time to learn the warning signs this month could be the best Mother's Day present you could give someone. It can mean the difference between life and death.

A critical step in surviving a stroke is speed. Call 911 as soon as the signs are evident. Every 53 seconds someone in the United States experiences a stroke, and every 3.3 minutes someone dies from one.

Stroke is the third leading cause of death behind diseases of the heart and cancer. It is a leading cause of serious, long-term disability.

Prevention and knowing the warning signs of a "brain attack" are the best defense against strokes.

The warning signs include:

- Sudden numbness or weakness of face, arm or leg, especially on one side of the body.
- Sudden confusion, trouble speaking or understanding.
- Sudden trouble seeing in one or both eyes.
- Sudden trouble walking, dizziness, loss of balance or coordination.
- Sudden severe headaches with no known cause.

Every second is crucial when these symptoms present themselves. An immediate call to 911 is crucial because treatment can be more effective if given quickly.

Early detection and immediate treatment of stroke may prevent some brain injury. Tissue plasminogen activator (TPA), a drug that may help reduce disability from stroke, must be administered within three hours after the onset of stroke symptoms to be most effective.

What is a stroke? It is very similar to a heart attack. Strokes occur when a blood vessel bringing oxygen and nutrients to the brain bursts or is clogged by a blood clot of some other particle. This rupture or blockage keeps part of the brain from getting its necessary oxygen. Without oxygen, the nerve cells can't function and die within minutes.

The part of the body that these cells control also can't function, which can sometimes lead to death.

Sometimes a major stroke is preceded by a series of "mini" strokes days, weeks or even days beforehand. These temporary strokes result when a blood clot or other particle temporarily clogs an artery and part of the brain doesn't get the supply of oxygen that it needs. Mini strokes do not cause permanent damage but are a warning sign and can be treated with drugs that keep clots from forming.

Stroke doesn't have to be a hopeless situation. Many treatments and rehabilitative therapies can help stroke survivors and their families recover and cope. Even after a stroke, survivors can still enjoy happy, activity-filled lives.

The American Heart Association's Stroke Connection program provides resources and support to survivors, their families and caregivers. It makes it possible for those affected by stroke to get help from those who have also been affected by it. Support is vital to recovery. For more information on this program, all it takes is a call to the "warmline": 1-800-553-6321.

Life hangs in the balance with stroke — don't wait on calling. Every second does count. — V.E.H.

This isn't the last we'll hear of little Elian

Elian Gonzalez has become a household name over the past few months. It is as familiar as Bill Clinton, Monica Lewinsky, Janet Reno, Oprah Winfrey, Jerry Falwell, Larry Flynt, Jesse Jackson and the Three Stooges.

The Real World

By B.J. Sessions, senior columnist.

The 6-year-old Cuban boy was rescued from dangerous ocean waters near Miami, Fla., while hanging on to an innertube last November after his mother drowned trying to reach America. The government has been trying hard to unite Elian with his father, Juan Miguel Gonzalez, who had been waiting in Washington for 10 days.

Then the saga of Elian exploded at the home in the Little Havana section of Miami where he was living with relatives. It was the highlight, or lowlight (depending on your feeling), when the saga of Elian Gonzalez came to pass. It will continue at least until 2001, and maybe infinity.

Shortly after 5 a.m. Saturday, April 21 the front door of the home was bashed in with a battering ram. Eight armed agents, one a bilingual female (English and Spanish), rushed in and pulled off a "snatch and run," grabbing the boy from the arms of the man who had pulled him from the ocean in November.

Elian was then rushed to a waiting government airplane and flown to Andrews Air Force Base into the loving arms of his father. The television crews, photographer and reporters came on like gangbusters. Reportedly, there were more than 40 television crews on the scene. Little Havana was knocked on its ears as well as other portions of its anatomy.

All the ingredients of a full scale riot soon became evident as the news of the "snatch and run" spread like wildfire is a windstorm. The riot would have become a destructive reality had it not been for the excellent work of the Miami police. Still, 275 people were arrested and four policemen were injured with baseball bats, rocks and bottles.

The story of Elian Gonzalez has been offered more television time than the O.J. Simpson case, Watergate, the investigation of Bill Clinton, the campaigns of George W. Bush and Al Gore, Richard Gephardt, plus "Green Acres," "The Andy Griffith Show" and the NBA playoffs.

I'm sure of one thing — Elian won't occupy the Oval Office for the next four years — he will have a check of a lot to do with the one who does. Welcome to the real world.

Virginia's government lacks Christian values

Every year when I fill out my Virginia income tax return, I get mad all over again. It is a disgrace that I live in a state that expects a person who earns a total of $300,000 in a whole year to pay a tax on that amount of $4!

Perspectives

By Eileen Huey, columnist

That's right — Virginia taxes 2 percent on the first dollar earned up to $3,000. Then that tax rate jumps by a whopping 50 percent to a tax rate of 3 percent of all income earned from $3,000 to $5,000. Remember, we're talking about annual income here. A person earning $5,000 annually is being paid the grand total of $410 a month.

But it gets worse — much worse! Once a person reaches this "pinnacle" of $5,000 a year, the Commonwealth doesn't just increase the rate by half, but this time by two-thirds. Every dollar earned between $5,000 and $17,000 now generates tax revenues for Richmond based on the rate of 5 percent.

Given such giant leaps in the tax rates on such meager income, one would suspect the rich must really be getting soaked by our state government. No — quite the opposite. Astonishingly, now that Commonwealth has bled its working poor dry of dollars needed for daily survival, suddenly the tax rate hikes stop altogether.

Income earned over $17,000, which is $1 or 10 percent billion dollars, is taxed at the flat rate of 5.75 percent. That is, a mere .75 is added to the 5 percent our working poor and impoverished are expected to fork over from their meager household incomes.

And Gov. Gilmore and his conservative brouhaha-ers proclaim over and over that they want the working poor to keep more of their own money. Sure they do, and I have the Brooklyn Bridge for sale when you finish signing onto that.

The federal government doesn't impose an income tax on folks below the poverty line, nor does almost any other state in the union. Not only do most states not tax such life and death income, but even the few that do impose an income tax on low-income earners certainly don't do so at the outrageous rate of 5 percent.

In fact, not only is taxing those below the poverty line rejected by the policy makers of most states, many even have an state-earned income tax credit (based on the federal model) which provides tax refunds to their most impoverished citizens. Apparently, other states believe that citizens who work 50 hours a week, 52 weeks a year deserve to be able to provide food, clothing and shelter for themselves and their families.

But, not Virginia. No, sir, we're tough in this state on those folks who work at low paying jobs. They can pay taxes at the same rate as our millionaires (of which we have our fair share). Our tax code alone helps see to that.

After all, if those frozen in low-income jobs wanted to earn enough to support themselves and their families, they should have had the foresight to be born to rich parents, or at least to those in the upper middle-class. That's Virginia's ticket to the top schools and the good paying jobs that follow them.

Some Christian state this is! I wonder what part of Jesus' message Virginia's self-proclaimed faith-community actually hears. There is not an ounce of social consciousness, never mind human compassion and brotherhood, in any state whose policy it is to exploit its poorest citizens in order to advantage its most privileged.

And, what does Virginia have to show for it? Well, for one thing, we can boast of having the worst income disparity in the nation, far worse than the national average, which is atrocious to begin with. Ninety-five percent of the annual income earned in our state goes into the pockets of 5 percent of our citizens. Put another way, 95 percent of Virginians toil all year so that 5 percent of their privileged neighbors can live in far more luxury than our planter aristocracy ever dreamed of.

Be that as it may, Jesus' message didn't get repealed no matter how deaf his so-called followers have become. The powers-that-be might be able to exploit the poor, both in wages and taxes, but they can't change God's law one wit, no matter how much political power they amass in this temporal world.

And it's not only anti-Christian to take the hard-earned bread off the tables of the working poor, it is anti-American to no longer value the productive labor or the common citizen. He and she are the backbone of our society. Without those who toil day and night, there would be no productive engine to drive American prosperity in the first place.

Shamefully, when it comes to policies based upon real values, Virginia's middle name is "Hypocrisy." No other state out-talks us on how very, very Christian we are, how highly we value our families, and that we are the last bastion of the truly patriotic devoted to principles upon which this great nation of ours was founded.

But, whoops — then we must face the cold reality of our public policies, especially our income tax code. Our taxation system reflects a society almost totally devoid of even the most basic of Christian ethics, family values and the egalitarian principle of the right of all citizens to the pursuit of happiness to the highest degree possible.

Time for sneezing, wheezing

Let the sneezing begin.

It's spring, which means it's time for unfortunate folks like myself who are plagued with allergies to wheeze, sneeze and cough our way through the season.

Off The Cuff

By Victoria Hecht, editor

The next morning you wake up and it's covered in the yellow powder again.

Ever since I was a kid, I've been afflicted with the type of allergies that set my nose running like a faucet. My eyes itch, my head gets that uncomfortable sinus pressure and I can't keep enough tissues around. My husband says I sneeze more than anyone he knows — at least 100 times per day — and that I should call the Guinness Book of World Records.

Now that's something to be proud of, huh?

Then there are the folks like my husband, who rarely sneezes and isn't bothered by the first sniffle arising from allergies to pollen, dust and mold. Drat them all!

Unfortunately, I have passed on my allergies to our 18-month-old son, Mitchell, who has been coughing and sneezing his way through these spring months. On Saturday, the doctor gave him a prescription medication to keep his allergies in check.

Alas, what I could do for some medicine! But being pregnant, all I'm allowed is a certain brand of common allergy and cold medicine and the advice to stock up on tissues. I'm not allowed nose spray, and the medicine isn't making the first dent in my allergy symptoms.

I wonder how many Hampton Roads residents suffer the plight of the allergy-ridden? I'm sure it's many — so many of us seem to be in the same boat. We're the kind who watch the morning news for the daily pollen-level forecast. Of course, there's not much we can do about it but try to stay indoors and run an air filter around the clock.

I did get something interesting in the mail which helps me better understand why I'm doomed to suffer allergies no matter what. It came from the folks at Pledge-Grab-It, the furniture polish manufacturer which now produces dusting cloths.

Of course, most of us will do a "spring cleanup" at home this year, which is certain to aggravate any allergic conditions.

But check out these statistics. It's no wonder we're sneezing and wheezing so much.

According to a national survey by the University of Maryland, women spent 15.6 hours per week in 1995 on household chores — 11 hours less than in 1965. No wonder so much dust accumulates!

According to a 1998 survey by the Soap and Detergent Association, only 45 percent of Americans believe that regular dusting is beneficial to their overall health.

I found that interesting, considering — on average — Americans breathe in about 50,000 particles of dust per cubic centimeter. That's more than two tablespoons of solid particles a day! At last, a reason for all that sneezing.

And did you know that the average person sheds 1.5 grams of dust per day? Or that the average American household accumulates more than 40 pounds of dust per year?

That makes for a whole lot of sneezing.

And this is sure to gross you out: household dust is made up of more than 5,000 different particles including dirt, hair, animal dander, mildew and dust mite droppings.

Of course, allergic individuals like myself can do our best to keep the house as clean and dust-free as possible, but I find some of the advice hard to swallow.

For instance, health experts advise we should wash area rugs once a week. Sure, washing sheets once a week is standard. But rugs? I think not. And washing the blinds regularly and dusting the ceiling fan? Please!

And as far as meticulous dusting goes, I think most of us are too busy chasing around kids and working hard to make our homes pass the white-glove inspection.

Researchers and scientists have developed vaccines for polio, flu, chicken pox and bubonic plague. My question, when will allergies be next? I'd be glad to fund any studies — after all, I've got all my money laying around from my stock investment in Kleenex!

City scores hole in one with new TPC

Out of the estimated 30 million golfers in the United States, 16 million are considered avid golfers (play more than 25 rounds per year), and golf participation is increasing at the rate of 14 percent per year. Eighty-seven percent of golfers have a household income of more than $55,000, 57 percent have household incomes that exceed $75,000.

The Mayor's Report

Mayor Meyera Oberndorf

The city of Virginia Beach, knowing investing in first-rate golfing facilities is also an investment in the quality of life of the city and region, was happy to announce the completion and opening of the Tournament Players Club (TPC) of Virginia Beach and the Heron Ridge Golf Course in 1999.

alike. The city is making a concerted effort to partner with private investors to help develop the city's golf infrastructure and amenities to make Virginia Beach a prime golf destination. City leadership is attempting to tap into the growing popularity of golf to assert itself in the fiercely competitive tourism industry.

The city of Virginia Beach, knowing investing in first-rate golfing facilities is also an investment in the quality of life of the city and region, was happy to announce the completion and opening of the Tournament Players Club (TPC) of Virginia Beach and the Heron Ridge Golf Course in 1999.

Both TPC and Heron Ridge golf courses are first-rate golf courses that have the appeal to host major tournaments and enhance tourism efforts, but also have community assets that will enrich the lives of citizens and potentially enhance economic development efforts. Tourism is an important economic engine that drives Virginia Beach's economy and it is key to the economic vitality of the city. Revenue generated from the city's significant tourism industry provides critical income to underwrite the costs of city services, with education being at the top of the priority list. The city's golf initiatives are investments in the future which will help provide that revenue and help leadership keep real estate taxes stable.

The TPC and Heron Ridge golf courses are two components of a mix of entertainment venues that individually and collectively enhance the city's reputation as the premier resort city on the eastern seaboard.

TPC stands on 200 acres in the Princess Anne Corridor immediately west of the Virginia Beach Municipal Center. It complements existing and future entertainment and educational venues in the Princess Anne Corridor.

It is moments away from the GTE Virginia Beach Amphitheater, the Virginia Beach Sportsplex, the Virginia Beach Higher Education Center, the Planned Advanced Technology Center, the 2001 High School, Princess Anne Park and the Municipal Center. This massing of cultural amenities and civic facilities will provide a focus for Virginia Beach citizens for future generations and significantly enhance the city's reputation also as a prime sports and entertainment destination.

This 7,432-yard TPC course is managed by PGA Tour Golf Course Properties, which currently owns and/or operates 23 courses and licenses four additional courses in the United States, three in Japan, two in Thailand and one in China. Five courses are currently under construction and a number of other projects will soon be announced. The course was designed by Pete Dye with Curtis Strange serving as PGA Tour player consultant. The golf professionals are Jason Przymusala and Keith Bless.

TPC will be hosting their first large events in May. One is the annual Bruce Smith Tournament to be held on May 8 and the BUY.COM Virginia Beach Open is to be held May 15-21. The BUY.COM is the new name of the previous Nike Tour. About 140 of the world's top-ranked professional golfers will tee off in Virginia Beach in hopes of securing a berth on the prestigious PGA Tour for the 2001 season. The tournament field will consist of BUY.COM Tour tournament winners from 1999 and early 2000, plus top money winners from 1999.

The event also features an Open Qualifier for amateurs and a Pro-Am competition which pairs regional business sponsors with tournament golfers in an 18-hole playoff. The minimum prize purse for any BUY.COM Tour event in 2000 is $400,000, a 78 percent increase over 1999 purse minimums. The minimum first place prize will be $72,000. The BUY.COM Tour was originally formed in 1990 as the Ben Hogan Tour. The tour became the Nike Tour with the start of the 1993 season, and in October 1999, BUY.COM assumed the umbrella sponsorship position with the tour and will debut in 2000 with 30 events playing for approximately $12.8 million.

A key provision of the new agreement calls for BUY.COM to donate a portion of its golf-related web sales to the World Golf Foundation's First Tee program. The First Tee program is designed to provide access to affordable golf to people who otherwise would have none. The program places a special emphasis on reaching children and instilling in them the values inherent to the game of golf.

Designed to produce greater opportunities for aspiring PGA Tour players to develop their skills, BUY.COM Tour alumni have collected 72 PGA Tour titles. David Duval, Tom Lehman, Ernie Els, Jim Furyk and Jeff Maggert are among Nike Tour alumni. A record 19 titles were won by tour alumni in 1999.

The BUY.COM Tour will have a significant impact on local communities with events raising approximately $16 million for charity since 1990. Monies contributed by the BUY.COM Virginia Beach Open will go toward the support of the local Boys and Girls Club of South Hampton Roads.

Nicki Woolery: Outstanding City Employee

By Victoria Hecht

Editor

Nicki Woolery is the type of municipal employee that city government dreams about: she's willing to roll up her sleeves, do what it takes and loves Virginia Beach.

These are just some of the reasons why she was recently named Outstanding City Employee.

Administrative services manager for the Department of Convention and Visitor Development, Woolery has been with the city for two decades and frequently volunteers for additional duties. Her municipal career began with the Department of Parks and Recreation.

Woolery finds it ironic that she won the honor since the first person named Outstanding City Employee was her first supervisor, Dick Branch.

A native of the North Carolina piedmont, Woolery fell in love with Virginia Beach while visiting the resort city in 1971. She knew she had to live here.

"I think I'm a beach girl at heart," she smiled.

Woolery still loves her adopted hometown, though it has grown significantly larger in 29 years. Being named Outstanding City Employee of the Year by the Rotary Club was icing on the cake.

"It has been a rough couple of years," admitted Woolery, who was stunned and cheered by the special honor. "My son has had surgeries after being in a car accident, and my brother died."

Every time the telephone rang, Woolery was expecting more bad news. The honor was a welcomed — and appreciated — change.

Especially the wonderful things said by colleagues in nomination letters:

"I can always count on Nicki to look at an issue with passion and intelligence."

"It takes a special kind of person to be a mentor. Nicki has this wonderful quality of coaching and teaching without your even being aware of the knowledge she is imparting."

"Nicki has always had the ability to look beyond herself and her own department and see the bigger picture and how she could contribute."

Woolery admits she loves to "get a reaction" from others by saying she doesn't work for the Department of Convention and Visitor Development — but something larger.

"I tell them I'm in the business of people. I operate from a different frame of reference. I love being a public servant, but I also get to work in the resort area. It's the best of both worlds," she explained.

Woolery said her life is not "fragmented" — split between work, home, family and community. It all mingles to form her being.

"When people say they don't take their work home with them, I don't know what that means. When I'm at home and read or see something which when I bring it back to work. When I travel I see exciting ideas which want to bring back to work. How can I not?"

Woolery believes a well-rounded citizen is a good citizen.

To help young people better understand the role of government, Woolery is a volunteer with Junior Achievement. She has also served as a facilitator for the Virginia Beach Volunteer Council's strategic planning sessions. She has worked for the Management Leadership Team as it went through the restructuring process and was vital in developing the city's Quality Service System. She is active on the Quality and Productivity Team. This year she's also an instructor with the Neighborhood Institute.

For years she has also coordinated the administrative center at the resort strip during the bustling Labor Day weekend. It's work, she said, but Woolery manages to make it enjoyable and son Drew, 16, is invited to take part.

In addition, Woolery gives her time as a board member for the Back Bay Restoration Foundation and helped develop and market the tram from Little Island City Park to False Cape State Park. She is a Master Gardener, volunteering through the Virginia Cooperative Extension Agency.

Despite all this, Woolery is surprised to be named Virginia Beach's top employee.

"It's the criteria is that they look for someone who is whole — who serves the community as well as their job as a public servant. I don't think they're looking for one moment of greatness; they're looking for a career of dedication."

Name: Nancy Adams Woolery.

What brought you to this area: My father's business relocated to this area in 1970. After one visit I decided to make this my home.

Hometown: Durham, N.C.

Woolery still loves her adopted hometown, though it has grown significantly larger in 29 years. Being named Outstanding City Employee of the Year by the Rotary Club was icing on the cake.

Age: 51.

Nickname: Nicki.

Occupation: Public administration.

Marital Status: Divorced.

Children: Son Drew, 16, student at Virginia Beach Friends School.

Favorite movies: "Good Morning, Vietnam" and "The Piano."

Magazines I read regularly: The Sun (wonderful literary publication out of Chapel Hill, N.C.), Fine Cooking, Fine Gardening and Coastal Living.

Favorite authors: All the poets and nature writers and Southern author Clyde Edgerton. We attended the same high school. I wrote to him a few years ago when our book club was reading one of his books — and he wrote back!

Favorite night out on the town: A nice meal at a Beach restaurant, a local performing arts event, followed by coffee and conversation and a late evening walk. (But I prefer to create a special night in.)

Favorite restaurants: Any Beach restaurant that offers more than one vegetarian entree.

Favorite meal and beverage: Pasta and wine (my mom's Italian).

What most people don't know about me: That I have a secret desire to play with the Virginia Beach Symphony Orchestra before I die. Of course, I've only had a dozen little lessons so far, so it's going slowly.

Best thing about myself: I enjoy living a simple life and have always believed my cup was half full.

Worst habit: Leaving my keys in the front door of my home (no, you may not have my home address).

Pets: All the birds in the marsh behind my home.

Hobbies: Gardening.

Ideal vacation: In a natural area, hiking all day, bird watching and identifying plants.

Pet peeves: Cars in the straight/right turn lane that are going straight. I know it's legal, but it wastes gas.

First job: Cashier in a drug store (lasted one day).

Least liked job: The one that only lasted one day. Before bar code technology, they provided no training and left me alone in the store. None of the merchandise was priced. They either had tremendous profits that day or serious losses!

Favorite sports team: I do no follow pro sports. I support any winning basketball team in the ACC and the Virginia Beach Upper School Soccer Team.

Favorite musicians: Flutist James Galway and guitarist Drew Woolery.

How I would like to be remembered: That she found happiness on the road to the "extra mile."

If I received $1 million: I would stop worrying about funding my son's college education. I have always had a fantasy of being able to make life easier for the people and institutions that have supported me. The list is long. If I had any left over I would consider replacing my 8-year-old Jeep Cherokee.

If I had 10 minutes on national television: I would encourage everyone to work for the common good, seek common ground, to love and care for their parents and children, to consume less, to learn more about their community by walking around the neighborhood every day, to drink water, to hold hands, to be kind, to follow their own voice and to turn off the television.

Malbon named chair of Neptune Festival

The 2000 Neptune Festival announces John F. Malbon has been named as chairman of the 2000 festival. The chairman oversees the production of the current year's festival celebration and is chosen from among the Neptune Festival leadership.

He must serve a minimum of two years with the Neptune Festival prior to accepting this position and actually rotates into this role from second vice-chairman to first vice-chairman before becoming chairman.

Robert S. Miller III, has been named first vice-chairman of the 2000 Neptune Festival and will be chairman in 2001.

Malbon is president and chief operating officer for Papco Oil Company, a distributor of wholesale and retail petroleum and lubricant products to commercial fueling facilities

Mayor Oberndorf takes fourth term on council

On an advisory referendum, voters voted 34,285 votes against development of the property into a hotel, parking garage and park, compared to 25,183 votes in favor of leaving the entire property as a park.

The question on the ballot was: "Should the City of Virginia Beach develop a panoramic public park on the city-owned property located on the ocean at 31st Street and Atlantic Avenue without permitting a permanent business establishment there?"

What effect the results will have on future council actions on the park is debatable.

Council has already entered legal agreements with the developers and the council make-up after the election. The most lively opposition to the development, the three-person coalition known as the "DEW Team," was defeated. It would most likely support the public/private partnership under which the development would take place.

City Council will have two new members, Rosemary Wilson, a realtor for Prudential Decker and a former teacher who currently serves on the School Board, and Robert C. "Bob" Mandigo Jr., an auditor in the U.S. General Accounting Office backed by councilman W.W. Harrison Jr. He defeated A.M. "Don" Weeks for the Kempsville District seat.

It was a victory of sorts for Harrison, who was frequently at odds with Weeks over what he considered his negativism.

Wilson will take over the at-large seat occupied by councilman Harold Heischouer who retired the first of the year. Former councilman John A. Baum was appointed by council to finish the term which ends June 30. All winning candidates will take office on July 1.

Margaret L. Eure, who has served two years on council, a retired business owner and planning commissioner for seven years, recaptured her Centerville District seat for another four years by defeating Walter W. "Wally" Erb, a senior systems analyst for Lockheed-Martin making a second bid for public office.

The fourth winner, Reba McClanan, retained her Rose Hall seat in an uncontested election. She won more votes than any candidate in the election with a 44,379 count.

Robert K. Dean, a former city council member, a member of the "DEW Team," was among the contenders for the at-large seat won by Wilson.

Dean, Weeks and Erb made up the DEW Team, which campaigned against public/private partnerships and specifically the 31st Street development. Council has supported public/private partnerships as a way to improve the economy of the city when the various projects would not be possible otherwise.

The council majority has maintained that its policies have made it possible to avoid real estate tax rate increases.

As Corillo looked upon the results in the mayoral campaign as an indication that the citizens wanted a change, so did the DEW Team members. They looked at the votes they won as a sign of dissatisfaction among the people with the way council was doing business for the city.

The DEW Team, however, was characterized by its opponents as the "Do Nothing Team."

Wilson will be the sixth woman on council, making it the first time women have been a majority on council. When Oberndorf first won a council seat in 1976, she was the first woman council member. The other women are Barbara Henley, Nancy Parker, McClanan and Eure.

The at-large seat attracted the greatest number of contenders.

In addition to Wilson and Dean, candidates included Valerie A. "Lady Luck" Carter, a transportation specialist, Virginia Truck and Equipment bidding the first time for elected office; Beverly Boone Harris, counselor at Norfolk State University; Gerald McDonnell, retired sheriff's deputy making his second bid for elected office; and John O. Parmele Jr., 23-year Navy veteran retired as master chief petty officer, making his sixth bid (all unsuccessful) for elected office.

The third contender in the Kempsville District campaign was Juanita Williams, a teacher assistant at Independence Middle School, a first-time candidate for public office.

The vote tally, with all districts reporting is as follows:

Mayor -
Oberndorf.....27,996
Corey.....25,893
Arauga.....5,225
Jones.....1,967

At-large -
Wilson.....26,336

Volunteers paint brighter day for elderly homeowners

enjoy themselves while providing fellow citizens with much-needed and greatly appreciated help.

"If you're not having fun, you're doing something wrong," said Decker. "At every one of our seven houses there was a group of people who looked at what needed to be done, then pitched in and took care of it."

"I'm thrilled, I'm so pleased," exclaimed Audrey Simpson as she watched the Cape Henry Rotary team paint her home.

"When you got to be my age, and you live on Social Security, you just can't do things like this anymore," she sighed.

Hughes used to paint and maintain her home on her own. However, she decided she could not do it alone anymore when she fell off a ladder while doing work on the second story of her house.

She was very grateful for the assistance received through Paint

Your Heart Out. She learned about the program through an advertisement in the newspaper. Criteria for selection requires that the participants be elderly (over 65) or disabled with low-income ($12,000 or less annually), live by themselves and own their property.

Edith Eggleston has lived in her home for 25 years, and even with a niece and nephew to help her, the job of maintaining her yard and home exterior became too much for her over time.

Eggleston was excited about being selected to participate in the program.

"This is such a blessing! I can't believe it," Eggleston exclaimed. "This shows there are still some pretty good people left in this world."

She added, "I was surprised when I got chosen, because I thought there would be such a long list." According to Decker, contrary to the logical belief that there would be a long line of requests for assistance, the Paint Your Heart Out Committee in Virginia Beach has had a difficult time selecting participants. Two too few met the specified requirements.

The selection committee works with Reside With Pride, a city-operated housing office. Reside With Pride collects data all year about those requiring assistance. Anyone desiring such assistance, or who knows an elderly or disabled person who could benefit from this program, should contact Reside With Pride, 426-5803.

Teen takes jab at boxing

to be in a real boxing match. We sparred, and I knocked her around the ring. Black eyes, busted nose, lips, everything. But she just kept getting up, and coming back for more. I could see that this girl was something special."

"He laid me out on the ground," Stevens admits. "He wanted to show me what I would have to expect. The whole side of my face was black for two weeks. But it just made me want to get back up, because I have to expect that in boxing."

Stevens gained her number three ranking after stopping six-year veteran Felicia Humphrey in mid-April (the first person ever to stop Humphrey).

It's time to spar. Belch ties a chest protector (similar to that worn by baseball catchers) around his waist. Then he puts on a pair of hand guards. But something still isn't right.

"Wait a minute," Stevens realizes, "I can't work out without rap music!"

She hurries to a nearby stereo and finds a rap station. Now clad in a one-piece workout suit, the young woman is ready to sharpen her skills.

"1-2-3!" he shouts. At machine-gun speed, Stevens throws a left jab and body blows.

They continue this for several minutes, with Belch shouting out commands and Stevens methodically working her combinations. Sometimes she tries to put holes in the chest protector; others, she hits the hand guards repeatedly.

A speed (peanut) bag hangs in a nearby corner, while a 70-pound heavy bag is nearby. There's also a double-in bag. Tied to the ceiling and floor with bungee rope, this interesting invention is used for head movement and combination work. In the next few hours, Stevens will use them all.

She'll then finish up with the usual calisthenics, like sit-ups.

"I also run about three miles a day," she adds. "Boxing is the toughest workout a person can have."

She takes a short break to play with Belch's young son.

"It definitely hurts when you lose," Stevens admits as the toddler causes havoc nearby. "You train so much, it's very disappointing to lose. But the next day, I just get back up and go back to running and working."

"I don't really get mad in the ring," she goes on. "I just think that if the girl hits me once, I have to give her three of my own. If she makes my head snap back, I have to go on top, because she's already got the point."

In amateur boxing, judges use a small computer to render points when one fighter scores a clean hit.

Stevens remembers the first time she was in the ring — an April 1999 match in Scranton, Pa., in which she defeated North Carolina native and U.S. Marine Tori Brown.

"I'm comfortable now," she asserts, "but back then, I was a little scared. With all the people watching you, you're afraid that you'll screw up. But now, I just think, 'I have to do what I have to do.'"

It's time to step back into the "ring" (actually, the carpet of Belch's garage).

"I'll spar with basically anyone who wants to step in there," she challenges, tying on a pair of practice gloves.

At Salem High School, Stevens also excelled in archery (winning the Virginia State Indoor Archery Championship from 1994 to 1998) and basketball ("I was the usual student, grades-wise," she laughs). She currently attends Tidewater Community College, as well as working at the Animal Medical Center in Virginia Beach, hoping to someday become a veterinarian.

"Later on, I'd like to win a belt," she says. "That's the biggest thing. It's not so much the paycheck, I just want the recognition. I want to be on top. I want to be a recognized female athlete, and pave the way for other women in boxing, as others have for me."

"I think people still think women's boxing is a joke," Stevens says. "It's coming around, but it's still not where I'd like it to be. I want it to be where men's boxing is now. It's not just catfighting, or brawling. Women have to be taken seriously as boxers."

"Women have a point to prove," she says. "It all boils down to that."

ARE employees adopt long-term care facility

For the third year, members of the Association for Research and Enlightenment (ARE) are making a difference in the lives of the 61 residents at Ballentine Manor Assisted Living Facility in Norfolk.

Joan Grasser, manager of membership services at ARE, approached the Citizens' Committee to Protect the Elderly when her employees were searching for a meaningful service project.

They accompanied CCPE Director of Community Service Projects Judith Allison to Ballentine Manor, and as Grasser said, "We were hooked. They (the residents) were so appreciative of everything we did and we have had so much fun preparing special treats for each holiday. This has been a wonderful experience for us."

Approximately 12 of Grasser's employees share the shopping and preparation chores to create gifts and treats for Ballentine Manor's residents. ARE employee Mary Hughes who lives nearby has become the designated "deliverer" of the gifts each season.

Grasser says this opportunity for service defines what ARE is all about. "To make manifest the love of God and man."

The 61 residents — many of them elderly, and many of them young people with no families discharged from Eastern State Hospital — have become the lucky beneficiaries. Administrator Ramala Mann voiced special thanks to the ARE and the Citizens' Committee for their work at Ballentine Manor.

If your group or business would like to "adopt" a nursing home or assisted living facility near you, call the Citizens' Committee, 498-8600.

Sentara slates care symposium

Sentara Home Care Services is sponsoring a Hospice and Palliative Care Symposium, "Challenges for the New Millennium," to be held Thursday, May 11 at the Ramada Plaza Resort, 58th Street and Oceanfront in Virginia Beach. The symposium will provide professionals and lay helpers who care for the hospice patient with new skills and knowledge in the management of individualized pain in the five quality of life domains: physical, emotional, psychological, social and spiritual.

The keynote speaker will be Dr. Alan D. Wolfelt, noted author, educator, and grief counselor, who will speak on "Healing the Bereaved Child and Adolescent: Growth-Oriented Approach." Wolfelt serves as director of the Center for Loss and Life Transition in Fort Collins, Colorado, and is on the faculty at the University of Colorado Medical School in the Department of Family Medicine. He writes a "Children and Grief" column for Bereavement magazine. He has also written numerous books on healing and grief such as "Healing the Grieving Heart: 100 Practical Ideas for Family, Friends and Caregivers," which will be available for purchase and signing by the author. Continuing Education Units (6.4 hours) are also available.

City dedicates new Cooke school

the burying of a time capsule. Placed inside were a copy of the latest yearbook, an issue of the student newspaper and even a pack of Pokemon cards.

"My only regret," joked Assistant Principal Lisa Hannah, "is that we can't bury the tuft that Mr. (Principal Gregory Scott) Anderson wore when the PTA membership reached 100 percent."

"I have planned on giving the usual dedication speech," said guest speaker and Virginia Beach city councilwoman Nancy Parker, "but earlier today, I read the newspaper, and there was an article about how 'lacker' our schools are, and I blew a gasket. I took great umbrage at those comments."

"When students go through middle and high school, and on to college, are they 'lacker' students, with 'lacker' parents, taught by 'lacker' teachers?" she asked. "I am here to tell you that we as parents are very pleased with the performances of our public schools. It would seem that anyone who would make those 'lacker' comments does not have a child in the Virginia Beach school system, or has never set foot into one of our public schools.

She continued, "At Cooke Elementary School, there is more than learning about numbers and letters. There is an appreciation of the diversity of our community. Children come here from all backgrounds, and the teachers here have arms wide enough and hearts big enough to insure that each child has a chance to achieve."

Such an occasion was quite the reason for happiness and excitement.

But for Anderson, the day also brought an aura of sadness. "This is a bit of a sad day for me," he said, "because someone that for many years has been an incredible assistant at our school is moving on to become the principal of Bailey Elementary School tomorrow morning."

"My assistant principal, Lisa Hannah, is one of the most gifted administrators in this city, and I attempted to hide that fact for many years, or she would have left me two or three years ago," he joked. "We have been blessed to have her here. We will miss her dearly, and she will always be special to me, to all of the students and teachers." He presented her with a drawing of the new school.

"It's been a wonderful seven years," said an emotional Hannah after a standing ovation. "I've done a lot. I've made wonderful friendships. Cooke Elementary has been a beacon to our community for over 90 years. Here we are at the path of our new school, with the past at our backs, and the future before us. Our excitement and determination, and a strong foundation of the past, will help us move into the future."

"Yes, I am sad about leaving," Hannah admitted after the ceremony, "but I'm also happy. There's mixed emotions, but it's just time to move on."

Refreshments were served after the speeches, and visitors were allowed to tour the renovated school, visiting the classrooms, gymnasium, and elsewhere in Cooke.

Student tour guides could be seen in the halls, answering questions about the school and guiding visitors throughout. "Since I'm the SCA President and the Captain of the Safety Patrol, I guess they figured that I'm really responsible enough to be a guide," theorized student Kyle Upson. "They're partially right."

Other students in attendance spoke highly of their new school. "This school is awesome," said fifth grader Corey Maggard. "The technology is really great, everything is so state-of-the-art. The computer labs, the pop-up screens, the types of music you can listen to on the computers. This place just rocks."

March For Parks highlights First Landing activities

A busy May program of events is planned at First Landing State Park.

All programs are free and open to the public with parking fees. For more information call, 412-2306. Events are:

■ Saturday, May 6 - March For Parks, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. The National Parks and Conservation Association holds its eighth annual March for Parks - America's largest national walk event for parks. To celebrate Earth Day, this event raises awareness and funds for America's national, state and local public parks and public lands. All money raised at First Landing State Park is solely for us to bring more and better services to the community.

■ Sunday, May 7, osprey hike, 8:15 a.m. The Middlebrooks will guide you to see nesting osprey found in the park. Mating and feeding practices will be discussed. Binoculars supplied or bring your own. Meet at the 64th Street, Narrows Beach parking lot.

■ Saturday, May 13, treasure hunt, 1 to 2 p.m. Join your child in a treasure hunt to discover the wonderful treasures in nature as you walk along our trails. Meet at the Trail Center for a fun, educational family activity.

■ Sunday, May 14, botanical tour, 10 a.m. to noon. Meet with volunteer interpreter, Byron Babcock, for a look at plants native to the park. As we walk, we will discuss the relationships among plants species as well as the many roles that plants in our own lives. Meets at the Trail Center.

■ Saturday, May 20, woodpecker walk, 8:15 a.m. See the park through the eyes of volunteer bird expert Bill Shealy. Walk takes about one hour, but participants may leave any time during the hike. Children are welcome. Binoculars supplied or bring your own. Bring a snack and water. Meet at the 64th Street, Narrows Beach parking lot, light rain or shine.

■ Sunday, May 28, botanical tour, 10 a.m. to noon. Meet with volunteer interpreter Byron Babcock, for a look at plants native to the park. As we walk, we will discuss the relationships among plant species as well as the many roles that plants play in our own lives. Meets at the Trail Center.

parking lot, light rain or shine.

■ Friday, May 26, night hike, 8 p.m. Join Bill McCord, volunteer interpreter, for an hour-long hike in the dark without the aid of a flashlight. Sensory awareness, nocturnal animals and even a little park history will be key in this program. Meet after sunset at the Trail Center. Call 412-2306 to confirm time.

■ Sunday, May 21, osprey hike, 8:15 a.m. The Middlebrooks will guide you to see nesting osprey found in the park. Mating and feeding practices will be discussed. Binoculars supplied or bring your own. Meet at the 64th Street, Narrows Beach parking lot.

■ Friday, May 26, crabbing, 7 p.m. Come to our first crabbing event of the 2000 season. Great program for families and anyone interested in learning how to crab with a baited line. All children must be accompanied by an adult. Line and bait can be purchased for a small fee from our park store, nets will be provided, or you may bring your own. Wear clothes that can get wet and old sneakers or water shoes. Sunscreen and a hat are recommended. Program is canceled in the event of rain.

■ Saturday, May 27, woodpecker walk, 8:15 a.m. See the park through the eyes of volunteer bird expert Bill Shealy. Walk takes about one hour, but participants may leave any time during the hike. Children are welcome. Binoculars supplied or bring your own. Bring a snack and water. Meet at the 64th Street, Narrows Beach parking lot, light rain or shine.

1,000-plus students perform at amphitheater

The Virginia Beach Public Schools Education Foundation and the VBPCS music department announce co-sponsorship of "Stars, Musical Bars and Bands," a special concert saluting the military.

More than 1,000 middle and high school band students will perform on stage at the GTE Amphitheater on June 1. The concert begins at 7:30 p.m.

The concert showcases Virginia Beach band students playing a varied repertoire of patriotic music under the direction of guest conductors. In addition, a Navy flyover and presentation of colors along with a colorful display of all 50 state flags by Naval Junior Reserve Officer Training Corps students will kick off the concert. Student flag bearers will also present choreographed routines for several musical numbers. The grand finale will be a rousing rendition of "Proud To Be An American," followed by a spectacular fireworks display.

Denise Lawson, executive director for the Virginia Beach Schools Education Foundation, said "This is the second consecutive year we are sponsoring this concert. Last year's event was a spectacular success and we expect this year's concert to be even bigger and better. In fact, we are submitting the event to the "Guinness Book of Records" in an attempt to set the world record for the largest student band performing on stage. Not only that," Lawson continued, "all monies raised from the concert benefit the Virginia Beach Public Schools music department as well as the Virginia Beach Schools Education Foundation teacher grant fund. We have a win-win situation."

Co-chairman of the event and coordinator of music education Dr. Steve Ambrose reiterates the point. "Our students have the unique opportunity of playing in the most public of venues for some of the most talented conductors in the area. Not only do they have a great time, they are able to capitalize on a great learning experience. They are all looking forward to the event and all the hoopla that goes with it."

Tickets for the June 1 event are $5 each, with children 12 and under admitted free. Tickets are available now at all Farm Fresh Supermarket locations, the GTE Amphitheater ticket office, VBPCS middle and high schools, the school administration office, and the division's website at www.vbpcs.k12.va.us. Parking is free.

Tour the strip with the HRT Beach trolley

See the sights the easy way

Hampton Roads Transit (HRT) is starting the Beach Trolley service earlier this year. Now there is no reason to wait to enjoy the beach attractions without the hassle of driving and parking. The Beach Trolley begins running the Atlantic Avenue route, from the North End of the Beach to Rudee Inlet April 21 through Oct. 29.

The old-fashioned trolleys are a comfortable way to see the sights, visit museums, shop and dine without having to worry about driving or parking. Colorful Beach Trolley signs mark pick-up locations.

Trolley tokens are 50 cents and 25 cents for seniors and persons with disabilities. Three-day Beach

Trolley passes are available, good for unlimited rides at just $3.50 and $1.75. Many participating hotels and business also offer discounted or free tokens to their guests. Free ride tickets are provided to those who park at city of Virginia Beach parking lots and 9th Street parking garage.

Other popular routes of the Beach Trolley include:

■ Museum Express, 50 cents for adults, 25 cents for seniors and persons with disabilities, begins May 26.

■ Lynnhaven Mall, $1.50 for adults, 75 cents for seniors and persons with disabilities, begins May 26.

■ Northern Seashore, 50 cents for adults, 25 cents for seniors and persons with disabilities, year round.

For more information call 222-6100.

Order of Cape Henry 1607 pays tribute to First Landing

By Bob Ruegsegger
Correspondent

On an isolated portion of Colonial National Historical Park at Cape Henry in Virginia Beach, a massive granite cross memorializes an important step in founding what was to be the most significant settlement in the European colonization of North America.

This granite cross, erected in 1935 by National Society of the Daughters of the American Colonists, has been called the Cape Henry Shrine. It marks the site where the adventurers, who were to establish the first permanent English settlement in North America, first set foot on Virginia soil on April 26, 1607.

Several weeks later they landed at a location that became known as Jamestown — named in homage to their king.

Since 1920, members of the Order of Cape Henry 1607 have annually honored the memory of the Englishmen who — after a long circuitous voyage — erected a wooden cross at Cape Henry in sincere gratitude to God for conducting them safely to the shores of Virginia.

Order of Cape Henry members and their guests began this year's observance of that First Landing with a Sunday afternoon luncheon at the Fort Story Club. Playwright Bo Wilson, commissioned by the Commonwealth of Virginia to write a play that tells the story of the First Landing at Cape Henry, was the luncheon speaker.

"The working title is simply 'First Landing.' If we come up with something brilliant, we'll change it," said Wilson. "But I think 'First Landing' is actually a compelling title," he added. Eventually, Wilson's play will be performed for visitors in the amphitheater at First Landing State Park.

Both the subject and its possibilities induced Wilson to undertake the project.

"It struck me as an opportunity to tell a story that has never been told, and that's a rare thing in my business," explained.

Wilson is not a historian nor does he claim any expertise in history; nevertheless, he's fond of history in general.

"I'm always interested with history, and I'm interested with any opportunity to humanize it. I don't think that history is a collection of dates and places, I think it's a collection of people, and then you have to learn the dates and places to talk about those people intelligently," he said.

"It seems to me," said Wilson, "that the way history is taught in the public schools that the cut leads the horse — quite often. And anytime I have a chance to rearrange that backwardness, I'm happy to do so."

Although Wilson doesn't claim to know the whole history of Virginia Beach, he can't imagine anything more consequential than the First Landing happening here.

"You have the elimination of two Native tribes completely — the Powhatans and the Chesapeake are both gone," he noted. "That was the direct result of that landing. When you have an indigenous people extinguished, I think that's highly significant."

Of course, the landing at Cape Henry was one of the first steps in the founding of Jamestown, the first permanent English settlement in North America.

Wilson finds that fact significant, too. "We seem to have made a go of it between Canada and America, and I think that the ability to prove that it's doable is huge in the development of the nation, and so indeed you could make the argument that America exists because of the First Landing at Cape Henry. 'I don't know if that argument would hold up to microscopic scrutiny, but in a broad sense it's true.'"

After a commemorative religious service at the Cape Henry Memorial cross conducted by the Rev. Beverly Tucker, memorial wreaths were placed at the foot of the cross dedicated by the Daughters of the American Colonists in 1935. State and local representatives from the National Society, Daughters of the American Colonists and Children of the American Colonists fixed wreaths at the base of the ■ Windsor Oaks Elementary School will host a Spring Fling on Friday, May 12 from 6 to 9 p.m. This family event will include a flea market, bake sale, games, prizes and food. Tickets will be on sale at the door.

Relive the '70s in new print art exhibition

The Contemporary Art Center of Virginia is pleased to announce that "Looking at the '70s: The Roy Meyer Schapiro Print Portfolio," an exhibition of 12 large-scale prints will be on view May 5 through July 9.

The prints were produced in 1974 by some of the leading artists of the decade. Many of the works are signature images by the artists: Jasper John's target; Ellsworth Kelly's curve; Robert Motherwell's line; Robert Rauschenberg's newspaper; and Andy Warhol's soup can. The exhibition provides viewers with a compelling glimpse into the eclectic and individual styles that were explored during that era.

Other artists included in the exhibition include Frank Stella, Saul Steinberg, Claes Oldenburg and Roy Lichtenstein.

This print portfolio by 12 artist friends of the legendary scholar, teacher and art historian Roy Meyer Schapiro (1901-1996) was commissioned in 1974 to support the creation of an endowed chair in art history at New York's Columbia University named in Schapiro's honor. This exhibition was co-organized by the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts and the University of Richmond's Marsh Art Gallery.

Eileen Mott, coordinator of the Virginia Museum's Statewide Exhibitions program, says that this exhibition gives viewers a rare opportunity to see, side by side, superb examples of the many major trends that dominated the art of the 1970s.

"Realism and abstraction are often viewed as the two opposite ends of a scale of choices for artists," says Mott. "During the '70s, these two opposites vied for prominence in the art world. Major artists emerged from both realism and abstraction, and this exhibition allows viewers to enjoy the best of both worlds."

The Contemporary Art Center of Virginia is located at 2200 Parks Avenue in Virginia Beach. Gallery hours are Tuesday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.; and Sunday, noon to 4 p.m. Admission for exhibitions is $3 for adults and $2 for seniors and students. Children four and under are admitted free. Call 425-0000 for more information.

"Read a newspaper with your kids every day, and just watch them get rapped up in their future."

I bet parents sometimes shake their heads and wonder what's waiting out there for kids. Plenty. I started rapping when I was pretty young. And I can tell you, they'll need a lot of smarts to make it big, whether they want to be rappers or anything else: Luckily, my grandfather read with me every day...books...magazines...and especially the newspaper. So when I went out there in the world, I knew what was going on.

Read a newspaper with your kids every day, and just watch them get rapped up in their future.

OK'd budgets reflect increases in revenues; will expand services

By Lee Cahill

City Council Reporter

City Council has approved operating and capital budgets for the 2000-01 fiscal year which are more than $2 million over the budgets proposed earlier in the year.

As a result some previously unaddressed projects and requests from various agencies and citizens discussed at numerous workshops and public hearings over the past several months are included in the budgets.

Approved were:

An operating budget of $1,117,295,357, compared to the originally proposed $1,115,679,755. The budget was approved by a vote of 10-1 with councilman Don Weeks dissenting.

A capital budget of $136,424,540 for the first year, compared to a budget of $135,224,540 in the previous proposal and $517,059,004 for the following five years, compared to $512,382,806 originally proposed. It was approved unanimously.

What made the increases possible were additional state and federal funds and transfers from the general fund balance.

Just one week following the mayoral and councilmanic elections, voting went without a hitch except for the negative vote from Weeks on the operating budget.

Councilman John A. Baum withdrew his suggestion made a week ago to increase the salaries of the mayor and City Council which would not have gone into effect until July 1 following the next council election — that's two years from now. Current salaries of the mayor and members of council, which became effective July 1, 1989, are $20,000 and $18,000. The new salaries would have been $30,000 for the mayor and $28,000 for council members. The new salaries would have met the maximums set in the Code of Virginia which provides that cities with a population of 260,000 or more are allowed to set the annual salaries of their mayors and council members at $30,000 and $28,000.

Council also decided to determine income eligibility thresholds in its real estate tax relief program for the elderly and disabled in the same way the Social Security Administration determines cost of living payments to recipients. New operating revenues were included in the budget.

From the state:

Aid to libraries, $36,249; mental health grant, $332,367; school categorical grants, $60,001. School basic aid was decreased by $224,121 — the School Board has cut out some instructional positions because of anticipated statistics enrollment.

Beautiful berries are ripe for the picking

This season's crop bountiful

By Victoria Hecht

They're plump, red and bursting with perfection.

This year's strawberry crop is juicy and ripe for the picking, according to growers and pickers braving the blazing May heat to take home some of the local bounty.

In Virginia Beach and Chesapeake, demand is at its peak as devotees of the ruby-red berries flock to the fields.

In Pungo, producer Anne Baker is finding it hard to keep up with demand. She operates Brookdale Farm, a one-acre patch on Vaughan Road.

"The strawberries have been holding up real well this year. They're nice sized and in good condition," she said.

The spring crop is better than anticipated after a shaky fall.

"The worst thing we worried about was after we planted them last fall," said Baker. "We had nine or 10 inches of rain and thought they'd drown. We lost some, but they came back looking good."

Group homes impacting recidivism rate

By Lee Cahill

City Council Reporter

A study of the Tidewater Regional Group Homes shows that the homes make a difference in the recidivism rate of juvenile offenders.

Titled a recidivism evaluation, the study as done by Dr. Wolfgang Pindur, professor and executive director of the Graduate Center for Urban Studies and Public Administration at Old Dominion University, assisted by John Elliker, a research associate.

At a Virginia Beach City Council workshop Tuesday, the researchers reported that the Tidewater Regional Group Home Commission programs — 14 youth offender intervention programs are available, both residential and nonresidential — lowered recidivism rates, compared to a sample of all Virginia Beach juvenile offenders.

The study showed that 10 programs lowered recidivism rates — that is, juvenile appearance at a court service unit for a delinquent offense after having previously appeared at a court service unit intake or after starting a group home treatment program.

The evaluation showed that 10 programs lowered recidivism rates, compared to the sample of all Virginia Beach juvenile offenders; nine of 10 programs kept recidivists out of trouble longer than sample recidivists and that program recidivists return to court intake for less serious offenses than the general population.

At its formal session later, council adopted a resolution approving the city's continued participation in the Juvenile Community Crime Control Act's program which provides funding on behalf of the city to the commission.

The Department of Juvenile Justice under the Community Crime Control Act (VJCCCA) is providing a $2,471,013 grant to the commission on behalf of Virginia Beach.

John Matish, executive director of the TRGH, said that the residences have no locked facilities and in some cases the juveniles go to public schools. He said that the juveniles are in the facilities for crimes, which may be serious property crimes but no juveniles who commit a crime against a person are at the facilities.

Some programs require counseling, in which case the counselors go to the homes of the offenders. Camp Pendleton, which is for much younger offenders (ages 10-12) is located in Virginia Beach. Matish said that if it is an innovative program and professionals have found that it is important to deal with youngsters at an even younger age, like eight, to prevent more serious problems later on.

Folks get earth-friendly at celebration

CELEBRATE EARTH DAY. Earth Day was technically April 22, but that didn't stop the cities of Virginia Beach and Norfolk from holding their annual celebration at Mount Trashmore Saturday. Earth lovers basked in the wonderful weather and took part in environmental activities.

World's first landfill park was perfect host site for festivities

By Jason Norman

Correspondent

Thousands of people gathered at the nationally-famous landfill park Mount Trashmore Sunday to celebrate Earth Day, a holiday devoted to learning about the environment and how to help it grow and prosper.

With live entertainment, several activities and games, and countless exhibits, the event had something for every environmentally-minded individual.

"Earth Day itself falls on April 22," said John Duele of the Earth Day Planning Committee, "but we chose to celebrate on the seventh of May because of the weather. Early May is usually warmer than late April."

Duele was right — Sunday was clear and sunny, with temperatures in the 90s. "Norfolk, Virginia Beach and the Navy

Navy public affairs specialist Lamar Raker explained the connection between the Navy and Earth Day.

"We started about eight years ago, when the cities of Norfolk and Virginia Beach asked us to become involved," he began.

"This gives us an opportunity to show what the Navy does for the environment. We've been working on cleaning up our bases and environment for the past 30 years. We're heavily involved in recycling. Last year alone we saved taxpayers about half a million dollars in waste disposal fees by recycling, and about a million dollars with our pollution prevention teams, which cut down on hazardous wastes that the Navy actually uses."

REMEMBER MOM ON SUNDAY

Love your mother

"The hand that rocks the cradle is the hand that rules the world."

— William Ross Wallace

She's the one who kissed your hurts away, nursed you through long, hot nights when you suffered from a fever and made sure you had enough cookies for the school bake sale.

She is the one who gave you life. Is there any more beautiful word than mother?

The American Heritage Dictionary just doesn't do it justice: "A female parent." Consider the second definition: "To care for, nourish or protect."

While some may argue that the first lackluster definition is more indicative of their mother, for those with warm feelings for their "female parent," let us examine what being a mother truly means:

■ The value of a mother's love cannot be measured. For anyone who has ever known the warmth of this pure love, Mother's Day cannot be celebrated in a casual way. The sentiment and deep emotional ties involved precede that.

■ A mother's value, as the Bible says, is "far above rubies." Indeed, a mother is a priceless jewel.

■ While work beyond the home is and should be fulfilling, a woman's greatest pride is usually found in her family.

But a mother should not be restricted by her role as a mother. Motherhood is not and should not be enslaving. A woman is not bound by childbearing. Motherhood does not subtract from her life. Rather, it should multiply her happiness.

Good mothering is worthy of boundless praise. You should give it freely. Remember all your mother sacrificed for you? Do you recall all the times she "did without" for your benefit?

Remember your mother on Mother's Day. Cherish her now and always. — V.E.H.

ANNUAL FOODBANK DRIVE

Bag 'em up

Postal carriers bags are normally weighed down by letters, catalogs and parcels. But on Saturday local carriers will be making some special pickups during their delivery rounds.

The National Association of Letter Carriers will host their annual food drive to benefit the Foodbank of Southeastern Virginia that day. Local residents can do their part to fight hunger simply by leaving non-perishable food items in a bag near the mailbox — but no glass or home-canned foods.

Last year, more than 142,000 pounds of food was collected in Hampton Roads, making it one of the largest food drives of its type in Southeastern Virginia. Across the country, 62.5 million pounds of food were collected for those in need. This year's local goal is 148,000 pounds of food.

Why the need? The Foodbank of Southeastern Virginia, established in 1981 to reduce hunger and food waste, has distributed more than 90 million pounds of fresh, frozen, shelf-stable and prepared foods. The Foodbank serves five counties and six cities in a 3,300-square-mile area, including South Hampton Roads, Western Tidewater and the Eastern Shore. More than 110,000 people in Southeastern Virginia live below the poverty level and, without help, would regularly not get enough to eat. The Foodbank provides more than 10,500 meals a day — over six million meals a year — to our neighbors in need.

Give generously to fight hunger and fill those mailbags. — V.E.H.

Million moms ready to march on Washington

Editor:

Every day a dozen children die from gun-shot wounds: some are crime victims; wrong-place, wrong-time victims; unlocked and loaded-in-the-house victims; and suicides made easy by access to a gun.

The Million Mom March is a movement of mothers from all over the country who have joined together to demand sensible gun laws that protect our children. Participants are moms and others who love children, husbands, siblings and friends to gun violence or gun accidents.

And we are moms who have lost no one, and never want to. On May 14, 2000 mothers, honorary mothers, fathers, grandparents and children will attend events in Washington, D.C. and in dozens of communities across the nation to send a strong message to Congress that they must take responsible action in this session by passing sensible gun laws.

This Mother's Day we will tell Congress that we expect results and will hold our elected officials accountable if they don't deliver.

Moms are very practical by nature. We're not talking about banning guns. No matter how you feel about guns, there are certain principles everyone can support. We want reasonable, common sense, enforceable laws. We're calling on Congress to pass a law requiring licensing with safety training and registration of guns. People should be required to be as responsible with a deadly weapon as we are for our cars.

We're happy to announce that most of the buses from Hampton Roads are full. Since there are many of you who still want to go, we have ordered another bus to originate from Military Circle, leaving at 5:30 a.m. sharp, with a pick up in Newport News. There are about 45 seats, which will cost $23 per seat. If you are a person who cannot go but would like to sponsor a seat for a mom who cannot otherwise afford it, we welcome a call from you. Call 686-5530 (Chesapeake) or 867-7144 (Peninsula) if you are interested.

Also the following will be participating with us: Rosie O'Donnell, Emmy Lou Harris, Melissa Manchester, Bill and Camille Cosby and many more. Oprah talked about this event on her May show, Diana Sawyer interviewed Rosie O'Donnell on "Good Morning America" on May 8. There were articles in both the recent People and Parade magazines about this event.

Capital punishment: Unmasking the myth

We Virginians know exactly how to deal with violent crime. We are convinced that the death penalty, consisting of a gun carry and trying children as adults will make us safe in our homes and neighborhoods.

Perspectives

By Eileen Huey, columnist

massacres.

After all, guns don't kill people, people kill people; and, in Virginia, we the people kill people who kill people. Sounds reasonable to me, even like good old-fashioned common sense!

But what does not make sense is why our sister societies of Europe and Canada (all of which have stringent gun control and no death penalty) produce much lower rates of violent crime, youth violence and accidental death from firearms. Not that we can't point to modern societies where the death penalty seems to be quite effective in decreasing violent crime.

Iran, China and even Turkey come quickly to mind, but, unfortunately, individual liberties and human rights are in as short a supply as crime.

Scrapping our Bill of Rights is obviously too high a price to pay. Still, these societies are useful in their suggestion that the deterrent value of capital punishment may depend on it being frequently and widely imposed. Now, there's a chilling thought!

Then there are those pesky findings by the Enlightenment founder of modern criminology, Cesare Beccaria, which proved that societies that impose capital punishment average a violent crime rate three to four times higher than those that do not. It was his seminal case study which began the western abandonment of the death penalty as an effective punishment.

No one familiar with the inequities inherent in the imposition of the death penalty throughout the United States can fail to wonder if Beccaria might not have been on to something after all. Death row is filled with the poor, the ignorant and, most often, members of our minorities, causing many to claim that being sentenced to death is far more a measure of access to competent counsel than it is to the crimes themselves.

Even the system for determining what is and what is not a capital offense fosters inequity. What murder, rape or kidnapping is not a heinous crime? Unless we execute all those convicted of such acts of cruelty, how do we justly decide who should live and who should die?

Clearly, justice demands that everyone accused must be afforded equal justice under the law, not just to protect the innocent but to insure judgment, not passion, is the operative principle when the decision of

"to die or not to die" is rendered in the courtroom. Even the American justice system falls far short of providing anything close to equal justice for most impoverished defendants.

Then, there is not the so insignificant fact that western culture rejected the principle of an "eye-for-an-eye" from its very inception. Cutting off the hand of a thief or the tongue from the bearer of false witness was considered pure barbarism even in ancient Greece and Rome.

Every society, of course, has the inalienable right to protect itself from its most violent criminals, but life imprisonment achieves that end. So since capital punishment does not deter crime, is impossible to impose with equity, could never equivoque for the crime committed and is not necessary to protect society, why do we even have a death penalty? To avenge our outrage, that's why!

But even if we could do the impossible and equitably calibrate dastardliness, convict only the guilty, and insure that all those similarly convicted receive the same just desserts, we have not overcome the greatest obstacle at all.

How does a Christian society justify its official sanction of an act of revenge? After all, it was not the Teacher of Righteousness that advocated nailing sinners to crosses; that was the exclusive purview of militaristic Rome.

This is one Virginian who fervently wishes her Commonwealth would come back to its senses and return to conduct in accordance with the teachings of the former.

sun was hot. Sweat trickled down my back and down my legs. But beautiful berries awaited under thick, green leaves. It takes patience to pull back the plants and find the treasure waiting beneath, but it's worth it.

After about 45 minutes Mary and I had filled up a flat of 10 quarts. Of course, that's when Mitch awoke and Timmy brought him out to the field.

We were done, but I wanted my baby to have his first berry-picking experience. We gave him his own little basket and showed him how to look for the ripe ones.

Pretty soon he found a beaut — a gorgeous red, nifty berry of perfection. He took a bite. He made a face and promptly spit it out.

I didn't know what to expect, so this made me laugh. Mitch's main foray into strawberries had been cooked ones or sliced, sugared and served in milk. He had never had fresh from the plant.

But it didn't matter to him. He was still happy with his little adventure picking berries. And we were too — watching him filled our hearts with a simple joy.

A little while later, we piled into the van and made a brief visit to grandpa Fosky's house in Pungo. We recuperated from the sun and bending over so much, wondering why our backs just aren't like they used to be when we were younger.

That night, after Mitch went to bed, I spread four quarts of berries — my bounty — on cookie sheets to freeze. Later this spring and summer they will be used in a variety of desserts.

Of course, I kept out a few of the prettiest and tastiest to slice and coat with sugar. I served them in a bowl covered with milk as a sweet before-bed treat.

Ah, fresh strawberries! Now this what spring is all about!

Then Mary and I hid the rows. The Picking berries is bountiful experience

I love strawberries.

I love the way they look, taste, smell and feel.

I love all that strawberries represent — wholesomeness, goodness, sweetness, spring.

What else would drive me to sweat it out under the blazing sun in 90-plus-degree temperatures for a few quarts of this savory produce?

Sure, I could buy a pint or two at the grocery store, but they can't beat the sun-purified perfection of a berry just picked from the plant and popped into the mouth.

Strawberry-picking time is becoming a ritual in my household, one which is anticipated for months to come as the sweet fruit ripens.

So, last Sunday, after dreaming about the trek for a week, the in-laws, Mitch and I packed into the van with baskets in hand. We had a mission: find the best berries to be had.

Of course, we set out for Pungo. Where else would we go? Heck, Pungo even has a festival honoring the beloved berry.

The temperature was soaring Sunday when we got out of church. Everyone warned it was too warm to be picking in a field. But heck, if the farmers can do it, why can't I? That's what I figured.

I dressed Mitch and myself in the lightest cotton rompers we had, slathered on sunscreen and set out for the in-laws' house. While driving there, I explained to my 18-month-old what wonders would await. I'm sure he understood every word of it.

BIG SMILE. Mitch was clearly pleased with the "fruits" of his efforts after strawberry picking Sunday.

We arrived at the in-laws' house. They were armed with big baskets. Mary was excited. Timmy, my father-in-law, has never been berry picking and didn't know what to expect. But Mitch was going, which would make the experience wonderful for all — even if it was hot.

During the long ride to Pungo, I anticipated rows and rows of the red jewels. I envisioned strawberry shortcake and ice cream, pies and other confections.

Then Mitch, toddler that he is, zonked out just as we approached the strawberry spotlight. He looked so peaceful, it didn't seem right to awaken him.

Timmy parked the van under some big shady trees and agreed to hang out with Mitch until he woke up. Mary and I grabbed our baskets and headed for the berry patch.

Berries! At last!

We were presented wooden, wired handled flats lined with quart baskets in which to put our berries. That was a change, but at least we could measure how many we hid.

Then Mary and I hid the rows. The Sell not virtue to buy wealth

By Allen Smith

"Sell not virtue to purchase wealth." — English Proverb

The desire to increase our wealth is one of the strongest urges that many of us possess. Somehow, some of us seem to have an overwhelmingly strong instinctive feeling that accumulating wealth is the pathway to happiness.

This basic belief is so commonplace and so compelling that some people accept it as fact and don't even question it. As a result, the compulsion to accumulate wealth becomes the primary driving force in the lives of many people. But the notion that accumulating wealth is the way to achieve happiness is a myth. Nobody ever finds happiness through the accumulation of wealth alone.

If we know wealthy people who are very happy, it is not because of their wealth that they are so happy. Likewise, poor people who are extremely unhappy are not unhappy solely because they are poor. Extreme poverty can contribute to unhappiness. When we lack the resources to meet even our most basic needs it is hard to be happy.

But once we rise above the basic poverty level where most of our basic needs are met, we are just as likely to be happy as those with enormous amounts of wealth. It is, perhaps, because of the fact that a small increase in wealth, when we are extremely poor, does contribute so much to increased happiness that so many of us conclude that the more wealth we have happier we will be.

Because most of us want to be happy, we are often tempted to pay a very high price for what we think will lead to happiness. And far too often, that price is a compromise of our principles. In the words of the old English Proverb, we "sell virtue to purchase wealth." When we compromise our basic values and principles for any reason, we diminish our potential for happiness, and no amount of increased wealth can compensate for that.

In order to be happy, we must be proud of why we are and what we have done with our lives. At the end of life's journey, most of us want to be able to look back and say, "The world is a better place because I have lived." If we can't say that, we should at least be able to say, "The world is no worse off as a result of my journey through life."

Selling virtue to purchase wealth may be tempting at times. That is because we are focusing on the short term. But, if we have any conscience at all, we will almost always live to regret such actions. Think about it.

City golf courses, tennis facility prepare for summer

Where can you find golf and tennis tournaments, leagues and instruction for youth and adults, management training, as well as open play? It's all available this summer right here in Virginia Beach.

The Mayor's Report

Mayor Meyer Oberdorf

Municipal golf courses at Red Wing Lake, Bow Creek and Kempsville Greens are gearing up for warm weather and folks who long to be outside after being cooped up all winter.

Owl Creek Municipal Tennis Center has undergone major renovations during the colder months and has planned an exciting summer for all tennis enthusiasts.

At our city golf courses, greens are aerated, bunkers are edged, and sand is evenly distributed. They have even corrected drainage problems, trimmed tree roots near cart paths and clearly marked any course hazards for your safety while you play your favorite game.

Summer rates have been in full swing since April 1, and the pro shops are fully equipped with your favorite golfing gear. In 2000, Virginia Beach welcomed new head PGA professionals at all three of our city golf courses. They are working diligently with the Department of Parks and Recreation to provide quality programming, improvements and instruction to our golfing community. Parks and Recreation invites you to tee off and meet the new pros.

We are also celebrating the new and improved Owl Creek Municipal Tennis Center, where Virginia Beach Parks and Recreation serves up tennis on a daily basis. This past fall, reconstruction (not to be confused with resurfacing) began on our eight existing tennis courts. New wind screens now enhance fences and the parking lot is larger and re-paved.

You won't have any trouble finding Owl Creek Tennis Center in the future due to a new eye-catching, lighted marquee appearing on the corner of Birdneck Road and General Booth Boulevard. Also, added directional signs improve the visibility of our city's tennis facility.

This past spring, the National Recreation and Park Association's Tennis Management Institute was proudly hosted and co-sponsored by the Department of Parks and Recreation at Owl Creek Municipal Tennis Center.

This training program articulated the latest innovations in tennis programming, facility management and benefits based strategies for acquiring funding support.

Qualified pros are available for tennis lessons and camps. Our instructors are also teaching throughout the year. This summer patrons are encouraged to visit Owl Creek and participate in tournaments, round robins, classes, private instruction and special events.

It's clear to see that golf and tennis are thriving in Virginia Beach and we are looking forward to another great season.

Wesleyan breaks ground on new student center

A formal ceremony marking the beginning of construction on a $18.6 million student center at Virginia Wesleyan College will be held May 17 following the college's spring meeting of the Board of Trustees.

The facility is designed to enhance and showcase academic, athletic, recreational and leisure time opportunities for the entire Virginia Wesleyan community. A partial list of the building's features includes an indoor 36 foot climbing wall, indoor swimming pool, racquetball courts, weight and aerobics rooms and new radio station facilities. The building is expected to be completed in September of 2001.

The 136,506-square-foot structure is made possible by a $10 million gift from an anonymous donor. It is the largest single contribution to the college since its founding in 1961. College officials will identify the benefactor for the first time at the ground breaking and announce the name of the individual in whose honor the gift was made. The student center will be named for this person.

The ceremony begins at 12:30 p.m. and will include remarks from members of the administration and athletic departments, trustees and alumni. A reception follows the ground breaking.

City upgrades 32-year-old council chambers

As part of its Capital Improvement Projects for 2000, the city of Virginia Beach will renovate its 32-year-old City Council Chambers to improve lighting, sound and construction.

Renovations and repair will occur in mid-July to take advantage of the two weeks per year when City

Grochmal, general services department director.

Asbestos located above the ceiling complicates replacement of the ceiling and other renovations that are needed. The project will include asbestos removal and installation of a new ceiling. Other renovations include new light fixtures, drapes, blinds, wall fabric and carpet, re-upholstered audience seating, and refinished wood case work.

"We plan to add a new staff work table with microphones, upgrade the sound system and television cameras, and add matching lighting characteristics to the new cameras," Grochmal said.

For the months of August, September and October, City Council and the Planning Commission will meet in the School Board Room in the School Administration Building, 2512 George Mason Drive, Building 6. The Board of Zoning Appeals, the Wetlands Board, and the Chesapeake Bay Preservation Board will meet at a former courtroom on the north side of Building 20 in the Municipal Center Complex. The public will be notified of the changes in location through VBT, flyers posted in Virginia Beach recreation centers and libraries, the Municipal Center Complex and other public places, and through print advertising. For more information call the Department of General Services, 427-4567.

"We plan to add a new staff work table with microphones, upgrade the sound system and television cameras, and add matching lighting."

David Grochmal, general services department director

Council is not in session with anticipated completion by Oct. 31.

The city is executing the renovations and repair due to the condition of the ceiling in Council Chambers. Over time, the lock spline ceiling tiles have begun to sag and separate. "As needed, we have patched individual tiles, but the entire ceiling is beginning to show signs of failure," said David

Susi Beisgen: Deputy city clerk

By Victoria Hecht
Editor

Sherry Lynn "Susi" Beisgen has an extensive background in the nursing and food service fields, so today the Virginia Beach resident likes to say she's on her third career.

"I finally smartened up and came to work for the city," said Beisgen, a deputy city clerk since February 1999.

The Clerk's Office is the behind-the-scenes mechanism that keeps Virginia Beach City Council running smoothly. Beisgen's duties include scanning documents into laserfiche for information retrieval, preparing the council agenda and notification/summaries afterward and attending to the electronic voting equipment.

She's also the office's designated "troubleshooter" when office machinery goes on the blink.

Beisgen brings a good-natured air to her job, a quality which reflects into her other interests as loyal Sertoma By The Bay member and dedicated grandmother.

Beisgen is particularly enthusiastic about the Sertomas, a service organization she joined several years ago. The club's motto is "Service to Mankind," hence its name.

The civic-minded woman's group was founded in 1996 for those who want to give something back to their community. Organizations supported by the Sertomas include the Red Cross, Women in Crisis Center, Norfolk YWCA, Judeo-Christian Outreach Shelter, Buff Foundation for breast cancer awareness and Muscular Dystrophy Association.

Beisgen is the Sertoma Club's sergeant-at-arms and vice-president-elect of public relations. An avid "fisherwoman," she is excited about the club's upcoming ladies' only fishing tournament during the Red, White and Blue Tournament in Virginia Beach in June. It'll be the first woman's fishing tournament aired on ESPN.

"We're hardcore fishing girls," she explained.

Describing herself as a "thoroughly modern granny," Beisgen also loves playing volleyball and spending time with her grandchildren when she's not casting a line. Beisgen's other passion is her "Heinz 57" mixed breed dogs, which she loves to take to the mountains on frequent trips.

For more information about Sertoma By The Bay call, 425-1028, or check out the website, sertomabythebay@aol.com.

Name: Sherry Lynn Beisgen.

What brought you to this area: I was born at Norfolk General Hospital and have lived here my entire life.

Hometown: Virginia Beach.

Age: Old enough to know better, but still young enough to enjoy doing it.

Nickname: Susi. When I was born the first girl grandchild in the family my mother proudly named me Sherry Lynn. She said she thought it was a beautiful name. The first time my grandfather (her father) saw me, he said, "She is no Sherry Lynn. She's my little Susi." I'm still Susi to all my family and close friends.

Occupation: Virginia Beach deputy clerk.

Marital Status: Single and loving it!

Children: Robert E. "Ted" Bautista, 34. He is an extremely gifted artist who paints, draws, etches, sketches, works in oil paint, acrylics, ink, pastel and watercolors, as well as being a gifted glassblower in the Venetian style. In his "spare time" he teaches wake boarding.

Quitsa Anne Noel Fitchett, 29. Noel is a multifaceted mother-wife-business woman and student. She and her husband, Scott, play coed softball, coach children's teams (her two boys are active in all sports) and in her "spare time" she surfs. Before marriage she was the first-placed woman surfer in Virginia Beach for five consecutive years.

Housing and Urban Development (HUD) Assistant Secretary for Community Planning and Development Cardell Cooper will be the featured speaker during the general session May 22 at 10:30 a.m. "We are delighted to have Assistant Secretary Cooper as our speaker," said Andrew Friedman, director of the department of housing and neighborhood preservation and senior vice president of VAHCO. "The HUD funds administered by Mr. Cooper provide important resources to our city."

Mayor Meyer E. Oberdorf will be among the many dignitaries present to welcome Mr. Cooper as well as other regional and state housing and community development officials. A host of Virginia housing officials will converge on the city to learn about, discuss and debate ways to help public housing residents move from welfare to work, bring new, affordable home ownership programs to Virginia's cities, and methods for administering programs more efficiently. The conference will feature concurrent work sessions focusing on HUD housing programs, community development bonds financing, construction contracts, and family self-sufficiency, among others. Conference discussions will reflect the changing face of public housing and community development and the new policies that will govern them. Experts from public and private sectors will discuss other topics such as:

Favorite movies: "Gigi" and "South Pacific."

Magazines I read regularly: Biography and People.

Favorite authors: Robert Ludlum, Clive Cussler and Mike Connolly.

Favorite night out on the town: Any night spent with good friends.

Favorite restaurants: Anywhere Mo Willy is the chef. He is currently at The Blue Moon Café.

Favorite meal and beverage: Seafood and wine.

What most people don't know about me: I'm very shy and no one believes me.

Best thing about myself: I love my family, life and work.

Worst habit: I bite my cuticles when I'm nervous.

Pets: Two American melting pot pooches, one male and one female. They were from a litter of nine from an abused and abandoned pup my daughter nursed and adopted six years ago. We found homes for all nine and my mom has one, too.

Hobbies: Volleyball, traveling and my Sertoma By The Bay Club. I am currently serving as sergeant-at-arms and vice-president-elect of public relations. I'm also a member of the "Touched By Elvis" Fan Club.

Ideal vacation: Cruising to Europe or anywhere.

Pét peeves: People who blame everyone else for their failure.

First job: Cashier at Colonial Grocery Store.

Favorite sports team: Washington Redskins.

Favorite musicians: Elvis Presley and Mario Lanza.

Most embarrassing moment: My mom and I were newly arrived in Paris. On our first day out I dressed carefully but had to borrow a slip from my mom (I forgot to pack mine). While we were approaching the Eiffel Tower, an extremely attractive Frenchman literally gave me more than a "double take" and I was very flattered. But when I happened to look down and sort of smooth my skirt, to my surprise my mom's slip was around my ankles and my skirt was around my knees.

How I would like to be remembered: As a happy spot in everyone's memories.

If I received $1 million: My friends, family and I would travel!

If I had 10 minutes on national television: I would smile hoping I didn't look as foolish as I felt (remember, I'm shy) and encourage everyone to believe in themselves, their family, enjoy life and help the less fortunate.

Housing at heart of upcoming conference

Community-building and self-sufficiency will be at the heart of an annual conference the city of Virginia Beach is hosting for the Virginia Association of Housing and Community Development Officials (VAHCO) from Sunday, May 21 through Tuesday, May 23 at the Sheraton Oceanfront Hotel.

Housing and Urban Development (HUD) Assistant Secretary for Community Planning and Development Cardell Cooper will be the featured speaker during the general session May 22 at 10:30 a.m. "We are delighted to have Assistant Secretary Cooper as our speaker," said Andrew Friedman, director of the department of housing and neighborhood preservation and senior vice president of VAHCO. "The HUD funds administered by Mr. Cooper provide important resources to our city."

Mayor Meyer E. Oberdorf will be among the many dignitaries present to welcome Mr. Cooper as well as other regional and state housing and community development officials.

A host of Virginia housing officials will converge on the city to learn about, discuss and debate ways to help public housing residents move from welfare to work, bring new, affordable home ownership programs to Virginia's cities, and methods for administering programs more efficiently. The conference will feature concurrent work sessions focusing on HUD housing programs, community development bonds financing, construction contracts, and family self-sufficiency, among others.

Conference discussions will reflect the changing face of public housing and community development and the new policies that will govern them. Experts from public and private sectors will discuss other topics such as:

■ HUD Home Initiatives, a new program that allows local governments to acquire single-family homes from the Federal Housing Authority (FHA) for $1 each.

■ Virginia's newest welfare-to-work programs.

■ Recognizing and understanding what residents face as they transition from welfare to work.

■ Crisis communications for housing and community development authorities.

■ Housing rental payment arrangements and,

■ Building neighborhood partnerships for community development.

Additionally, VAHCO will announce its college scholarship recipients at a special luncheon May 23 at noon. Scholarships will be awarded to eligible high school students residing in public and assisted housing.

VAHCO is dedicated to preserving and maintaining Virginia's existing housing resources, improving health and living standards of the people of Virginia, and developing new housing opportunities throughout the Commonwealth. VAHCO represents agencies and localities that use federal, state and local funds for the development, construction and maintenance of housing.

Children get international tour

Windsor Woods Elementary School and PTA held Multicultural Night recently with children's projects on display. Parents and friends exhibited flags, maps, instruments, pictures and artifacts from various countries. More than 200 adults and students participated and had their "passports" stamped at each country's table. Among those enjoying the Kazakstan exhibit was Gabrielle Williams.

Auction to benefit 4-H programs

The Virginia 4-H Foundation and the Virginia Auctioneers Association are hosting the sixth annual Virginia 4-H Benefit Auction, May 20 at the Marriott Hotel in Norfolk. There will be multiple auctions vying for the coveted title Virginia State Champion Auctioneer.

Preview and registration starts at 4 p.m. with the auction starting at 5 p.m. Proceeds from the auction will benefit Virginia State 4-H Congress Scholars. Bidders can snag great deals on antiques, collectibles, jewelry, art, furniture, vacation packages and much more. Purchases through winning bids are tax deductible contributions and anyone is invited to attend.

The Virginia 4-H Foundation is a non-profit organization that provides targeted support and private funding for 4-H activities. 4-H is an educational program that provides organized, structured and directed learning opportunities for youth to become leaders.

Bobulinski lauded for service work

The Making A Difference Foundation announces that Stacia A. Bobulinski, director of grants and business development and active tutor and mentor for the foundation, received the Marion Plagg Scholarship Award from the Potomac and Chesapeake Association for College Admission Counseling (PACAC).

She was one of seven and the honor recognized Bobulinski and the efforts of the Making A Difference Foundation. The award was given for exemplary service to the field of education.

This award is given to selected guidance and admissions counselors who work with underrepresented student populations, have professional contributions to the field of school to work/college transition.

'Friends in Time' opens Thursday

"Friends in Time" will be presented by High Frequency Wavelengths. Adapted for musical production by director Marilyn Danitz and musical director Glenda Palmer. "Friends in Time" is a student production in which a boy from the 21st century time travels to make friends in the 17th century. The young actors contrast their lives through song, dance and costume. The entire 21st century cast experiences life in Colonial Virginia from a child's view.

Three performances will be held at the Kempville Playhouse (inside Kempville Community Recreation Center) 800 Monmouth Ln., Thursday, May 18, 7:30 p.m.; Sunday, May 20, 2:30 p.m.; and Sunday, May 21, 2:30 p.m. Tickets are $7 adults, $5 students and seniors. Call 422-1240 for reservations.

$2 million awaits angler to catch biggest Blue Marlin

Producers and hosts of ESPN Network's premier big game fishing program will spend a week in Virginia Beach in late June videotaping contestants participating in the largest salt water fishing tournament in Virginia history.

The Virginia Beach Red, White and Blue Tournament, scheduled for June 28 through July 3 in the Atlantic Ocean off the coast of the resort city, will feature the largest potential cash prize in amateur sports history — $2 million to angler who reels in the biggest Blue Marlin over a thousand pounds.

There will also be a $500,000 prize for the largest State Record Yellowfin Tuna, Bigeye Tuna, Dolphin or Wahoo caught.

In addition there could be up to $750,000 in other cash awards (based on extent of participation) distributed to contestants who will fish on their choice of three of the five days of the tournament.

ESPN's bluewater fishing expert, Capt. Norm Isaacs, will bring at least five cameras and a host of personnel to record the competition and showcase Virginia Beach and Hampton Roads. The network will also cover a ladies-only tournament (June 26-27) prior to the Virginia Beach Red, White and Blue, proceeds from which will support the local Seafair by the Bay Club and the Buff Foundation for breast cancer awareness.

The tentative air dates for the first two programs on ESPN's Big Game Fishing the World will be Saturday, Aug. 26 at 9 a.m. and Saturday, Sept. 2 at 8:30 a.m.

The founder and director of the Virginia Beach Red, White and Blue Tournament is William Gooch, a Virginia Beach businessman and veteran bluewater fisherman. Gooch has secured financial sponsorships from both the city of Virginia Beach and the Virginia Department of Tourism and is currently recruiting additional financial support from local and national firms.

"Even though this will be only the first year for the Red, White and Blue," says Gooch, "it already has generated a lot of interest from sportsmen and women who like to fish in deep water for major species like blue marlins. The chance to win $2 million is a major bonus."

The Virginia Beach Red, White and Blue Tournament is the newest addition to the World Billfish Series World Tour, the "NASCAR" of sport fishing. The WBS series consists of five international and 17 regional tournaments in the United States. The Red, White and Blue will be in the Mid-Atlantic Division, joining three other events, all in North Carolina: The Big Rock in Morehead City (June 10-17), the Ducks Unlimited Band the Billfish in Morehead City (Aug. 3-5) and the Pirate's Cove in Manteo (Aug. 14-18). Participants in all WBS events accumulate points that can earn them a spot in the Grand Championship Tournament in the fall.

The Virginia Beach Red, White and Blue is expected to be a popular attraction for serious sport fishermen, not only because of the potential prize money, but also due to the location.

"The sites of many tournaments really don't lend themselves to anything but fishing," says Gooch. "Here in Virginia Beach, there is a busy resort beach, waterparks, shopping and other places to visit within an hour of the oceanfront. That's why we expect many anglers to bring their families and stay in our hotels, eat in our restaurants and enjoy all Hampton Roads has to offer. They will also be able to join spectators watching daily weigh-ins next to the Light-house Restaurant at Rudee Inlet."

For more information on the tournament or to register to participate, interested persons can call 422-9310 or access organizers on line at www.fishvb.com.

Chamber to honor top small biz

The Hampton Roads Chamber of Commerce and the Small Business Development Center of Hampton Roads will present the annual Small Business of the Year awards luncheon on May 17.

This year's five city winners are: ■ Chesapeake - Maximum Controls Inc., John E. Warren, president.

■ Norfolk - Taylor Document Management Co. Inc., George W. (Bill) Valos, vice-president.

■ Portsmouth - Way Back Yonder Antiques LLC, Ken Woodard and Ed Forlines, co-owners.

■ Suffolk - Virginia Graphic Design, Virginia L. (Jinks) Baney, owner.

■ Virginia Beach - Creative Gifts Galore, Debbie Mollura, president.

One of these winners will be named the Hampton Roads Small Business of the Year at the May 17 luncheon. The event will take place at the Norfolk Sheraton Waterside at noon. The cost is $20/person or $180/table of 10 for HRCC members; and $25/person and $225/table of 10 for non-members. For reservations, call the chamber's Reservation Hotline, 664-2558.

Virginia Power volunteers build new outdoor classroom

Just in time for warmer weather, students at Kingston Elementary School now can get a little closer to nature when they study it.

Volunteers from Virginia Power's Virginia Beach Office, Eastern Region headquarters, Chesapeake office and Chesapeake Energy Center put the finishing touches on a new outdoor classroom at the school on King's Grant Road last Saturday.

The effort was one of a number of school refurbishing projects undertaken by Virginia Power employee volunteers throughout the state each year. The "classroom" consists of a platform, lawn and rows of benches in a shaded, landscaped area.

The utility donated $1,000 for the project, and company employees did some preliminary construction last week. On Saturday, the school community pitched to help complete the project and to do landscaping.

"We foresee it being used for science experiments, for students coming out and maybe having a guest lecturer who visits the school," said Dr. Nancy Davenport, the school's principal. "Teachers could conduct a lesson outside if it had to do with nature, or if it's just a change of pace — just to get out breathe some fresh air on a beautiful day like this. I think it also focuses on the value of education: that we can be learning outdoors, we can be learning indoors."

The project was spearheaded by Joyce Luck, a Virginia Power senior customer service center representative, for whom volunteering is a family affair. Luck has two grandchildren attending Kingston. Her granddaughter often worked with Luck on other company volunteer projects — including building outdoor classrooms at other schools. "She wanted to know how could she get one for her school. So, that's how this one came about," Luck said.

Karen Prochilo, who has two children at Kingston, used her architecture background to help design the area. After making field visits to other schools where Virginia Power has built outdoor classrooms, she helped decide what aspects of the various different designs to incorporate into the project at Kingston.

"It's great to see Virginia Power working in cooperation with the school," Prochilo said. "This is really neat to have all these volunteers out here; it's very impressive."

ORDER FOR
SUBSTITUTE SERVICE

At a session of said Circuit Court held in the County of Eaton, Michigan on April 6, 2000, PRESENT: The Honorable Calvin E. Osterhaven, Circuit Court Judge.

This matter is before the Court on Plaintiff's Ex-Parte Motion for Substitute Service.

The Court having found that Plaintiff has set forth sufficient facts showing that process cannot reasonably be served upon Defendant in the usual manner provided by MCR 2.105(A) (1); that alternative service by publication for 4 consecutive weeks is reasonably calculated to give potential Defendant actual notice of the proceedings and an opportunity to be heard; and being otherwise fully advised in the premises the Court Grants Plaintiff's Motion.

NOW THEREFORE: IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that Plaintiff shall serve process upon Defendant by publishing the following notice in the Virginia Beach Sun, on May 12, 19, 26 and June 2, 2000 and proof of publication shall be filed with this court.

T. Thomas J. Marko

Earth Day celebration

Up and own the trail behind Mount Trashmore, exhibits from several environmental organizations could be seen. Ducle explained how they had come to be there.

"We have 60 exhibitors this year," he said. "We invited each of them to come and do something this year, to engage the people that come up to their booths. They came up with the activities for their booths. This isn't just handing someone a brochure, we wanted people to do something to learn something." Many of the groups had followed his advice; for example, one group held a game of environmental jeopardy, while a lizard-awareness group invited visitors to see and touch several different lizards.

"We are here today to promote water conservation," said Lynn Proctor of the Hampton Roads Water Efficiency Team. "It's a big problem worldwide, and something that everyone needs to be made aware of."

Proctor offered several tips on how to conserve water.

"People can turn off the water when they brush their teeth, make sure they only use their washing machine and dishwasher when they have full loads, landscape their yard with plants that don't require a lot of water and take short showers." "We are trying to prevent a Virginia Beach lake from being developed," said Bill Dampman of Citizens for Stumpy Lake. "Right now, a developer is trying to purchase Stumpy Lake, and we've been fighting for more than a year to prevent the sale. If we can hold it off until July 1, he won't be able to drain and develop it." "Our organization takes injured and orphaned wildlife," said Lisa Barlow of Wildlife Response Inc. "We rehabilitate them, and put them back out into the wild. We take anything that's native to Virginia — raccoons, foxes, birds, anything that walks, crawls or flies."

"We're responsible for the entire state of Virginia and part of North Carolina," Dmitrius Klaus of the Virginia Beach Stranding Program, an organization that helps animals that have stranded themselves on land, such as turtles, seals and dolphins. "We usually work with the Coast Guard to rescue, rehabilitate and release these animals."

On the side of the enormous hill that is Mount Trashmore, the event held live music from several local bands.

"Our band is called 'Slam,'" explained Virginia Beach native C.J. Johnson. "We usually do things like funk jazz and a lot of improv." Up, down and across the hill, many gathered to hear the bands make music. Near the center of the hill was an enormous contract, which visitors signed to pledge to do whatever they could to help their environment.

"Earth Day is a recognition of the fact that the Earth is our home," said Virginia Beach city councilwoman Nancy Parker, who made a commemorative speech early in the day. "It helps make people aware of the fact that the way they live their daily lives will affect how the Earth is going to be in the future, and that we do have a responsibility for our children."

"The trash has to be dealt with, the pollutants that come off of the streets have to be dealt with, the smog from cars has to be dealt with. These things don't magically go away; we are responsible for what we have to deal with."

Juveniles

It said that the majority of juveniles the court unit sees have some involvement in drugs. He said that for the first time the court unit will have a full-time person to look at this with a grant from the state. Evaluated were recidivism statistics of each program in comparison to a randomly selected sample of all Virginia Beach youth offenders over a three-year period from fiscal 97 to fiscal 99. Of the 25,000 offenders, 2362 attended the programs.

Of the less successful programs, that is, more of the offenders get into trouble again, the researchers found they usually lack aftercare.

Finishing Touches is gift to last a lifetime

Hecht's announced the summer session of Finishing Touches for Girls and Finishing Touches for Teens classes. The courses are available at Hecht's of Lynnhaven Mall, Greenbrier Mall, Chesapeake Square Mall and Patrick Henry Mall. All classes begin Tuesday, July 11 and continue for six weeks.

Finishing Touches for Girls is offered to young girls ages 6 through 11 and Finishing Touches for Teens is offered to girls ages 12 through 17. These classes will help girls discover how to look, feel and be their best in all situations, as well as help them develop self-confidence, poise and good habits that will last a lifetime. Additionally, the teen course will cover basic modeling, fashion awareness, natural make-up, career tips and much more.

For information on classes at each location, call the instructor at the site interested:

MMM GOOD! Berry pickers Shauna Belli and Sara Stalnaker, both 12, savor their efforts.

Picking season started about three weekends ago, about a week earlier than last year. A cool spring has been very friendly to the berries, Baker said.

Demand has been so great for the luscious berries that Baker has had to close early and open late some days so the fruit can ripen.

"We were closed at 2:30 yesterday because we got picked so hard. We didn't open until 1 p.m. today," she said Sunday.

Out in the field, families toiled under the weekend sun filling quart baskets on wooden, wire-handled flats. In many fields, like Brookdale Farm's, the plants are grown on raised plastic beds. It offers some protection to the plants and makes picking easier. Cost is $1.40 per quart.

Cyndi Warren enlisted the aid of her 15-year-old son, Dustin, to pick the berries.

"We're going home and make strawberry shortcake," Cyndi said.

She had hoped to avoid the mid-day sun and had arrived at 7:30 that morning to pick. But the berries needed a few more hours to ripen. They faithfully returned a few hours later.

"The berries look real good — better than the ones at the store," she said.

Landstown Middle School students Shauna Belli and Sara Stalnaker, both 12, eagerly plucked the produce in the hot sun. The two admitted they were eating as many as they picked. Any special gourmet plans for the berries?

"Just to eat 'em," Belli grinned.

Not a bad idea, considering the good luck strawberries are believed to bring.

According to Pungo Strawberry Festival organizers, folklore dictates "Eat Strawberries, save marriage."

In Native American Cherokee folklore, that's what happened when the first man and woman on Earth had their first quarrel.

MMM GOOD! Strawberry lovers, from left, Jeremy Barber, 9, Kendal Barber, 7, and Jeremy Russell, 9, sink their teeth into the luscious fruit.

Legend has it that the gods placed clumps of huckleberries in the woman's path as she fled the man. But it wasn't until she hit a patch of strawberries that she stopped in her tracks. She paused to taste the berries and found herself unable to go on, returning to her husband with a handful of the goodies — and a fairy tale ending.

Today, some Native Americans keep strawberries in their homes as a reminder not to argue and as a symbol of good luck.

Legend still has it that if you share a colossal double strawberry with the object of your affection, he or she won't be able to resist you.

A few facts to ponder

Ah, strawberries! The luscious fruit of Spring. Right? Wrong! According to the Pungo Strawberry Festival, the strawberry is neither a berry nor a fruit — the plant is actually a member of the rose family.

No matter, they're one of the most important commercially-grown crops in this hemisphere, consumed in 94 percent of all households.

And delicious, too. To get the best berry for your pickin' efforts, follow these tips from Pungo Strawberry Festival organizers and Anne Baker, owner of Brookdale Farm:

■ Strawberries ripen on the vine and should not be picked until they are bright red and ready to eat. Should you pick some that are still green, let them ripen on the kitchen counter.

■ They should be fat and shiny and have their green crowns attached.

■ Size makes no difference in the taste of the strawberry.

■ Look for very fresh berries that have had little handling.

■ Freezing strawberries whole works best. Lay them on cookie sheets and freeze, then transfer to freezer-safe bags. Do not wash before or after freezing; wait until ready to use.

GEICO employees lend helping hand

In Virginia Beach and around the area, the insurance company GEICO has become synonymous with community service.

On Wednesday, May 17, GEICO employees will join forces with volunteers from The Citizens' Committee to Protect the Elderly to entertain residents at Virginia Beach Healthcare and Rehabilitation Center at 1801 Camelot Drive. Music will be provided by Robbie and Lynley Meade, The CalypsoNuts.

The Old Country Buffet's life-sized mascot will be on hand to serve homemade treats, and Certified Therapeutic Recreational Specialist Buddy Hayes will introduce Brooke, a 7-year-old Belgian Tervuren who earned the honor of National Therapy Dog of the Year and works with residents in the brain injury unit, to Mayor Meyera Oberdorfer.

If you'd like to attend the May 17 event or any of the other events sponsored by the Citizens' Committee to Protect the Elderly call, 498-8600, 10 a.m. and 6 p.m.

Budgets approved

From the federal government -

- School categorical grants, $941,593 and food service funds, $36,513.

- Fund balance, general fund, $433,000.

Added to the budget were:

- Schools, administration, attendance and health, $245,016; pupil transportation $986,756; operations and maintenance, $483,585; food services fund, $36,513, and categorical grants fund, $1,001,594. A reduction of $1,939,478 was included for instruction.

Mental health:

- 11.24 positions funded through a state grant to provide assisted living services, $332,367.

- City treasurer - one accountant position, $38,956.

- Public libraries, reallocation of funding within the fiscal year 2000-2001 library budget to provide a one-time grant for $300,000 to the Boys and Girls Club for the construction of 5,000 square feet of space to be used by the libraries for five years. The remaining funding will be provided from funds within the fiscal year 1999-00 library budget. This will give residents in the Green Run area library services until a new library is built. Additional state funds to expand the library materials collection, $36,249.

- Museums - funding for an educational program at the Contemporary Arts Center of Virginia $20,000.

- Police - 14 additional replacement vehicles, $308,000.

- Tax relief for the elderly and disabled program - increase annual program caps by the rate of inflation used by the Social Security Administration, $35,000.

- Planning - the addition of one zoning inspector, $34,029.

- Management services - funding for clerical support to various boards and commissions $20,000.

- Public works - residential street sweeping pilot program for streets with significant accumulations of debris, leaves, etc., to prevent material from entering the storm water system. This would program service on a per request basis beginning in January 2001. An additional street sweeper will be purchased and one full-time motor equipment operator will be hired — $187,500; provide funding and staff for the beaches and waterways commission including a full-time administrative secretary, $40,000.

- Capital improvement program - increase pay-as-you-go funding in operating budget to support increased allocation for rural roads, $200,000.

The general fund reserve for contingencies will be reduced by $490,485 to fund the projects.

On the capital budget side, estimated additional revenues come from the state and local revenues including a $500,000 allocation from the general fund balance.

Additional projects include:

- Roadways - additional funding to rural roads in the first year budget of $200,000.

- Buildings - establish a new project for the South Rosemont Road Library - $4,456,198 for the second to sixth budget years.

- Parks and recreation - a one-time allocation of $500,000 in the first budget year to address identified open space needs pending the outcome of the open space initiative.

- Sewer and water utility - Shell Road West pump station replacement, $520,000 appropriation to date.

- Storm water utility - establish a new project for Lake James to construct a low flow bypass canal, $220,000 for the second to sixth budget years.

- Economic and tourism development - additional state funding for the Marine Science Museum expansion study, $500,000 the first year.

Lake James residents made a plea for the inclusion of $220,000 in the capital budget for drainage. The approved amendments included this among which was previously listed among the unfunded projects.

Residents said that the runoff from the surrounding areas and Mt. Trashmore are killing the lake. The community raised $5,000 on its own to hire a consultant and asked for the $220,000 for the design of a project. Being considered is the construction of a low flow bypass canal from the inflow and outflow canal systems at Lake James.

Incumbents, newcomers set goals for upcoming City Council terms

Their request: More citizen input

By Colleen Holmes
Correspondent

Wanted: taxpayer input. That is the request of each recently elected Virginia Beach City Council member and the mayor.

This month's election returned two members to the City Council, Margaret Euerd and the unopposed Reba McClanan. Council newcomers Rosemary Wilson and Robert "Bob" Mandigo will take office June 1.

Meyera Oberndorf will begin her 13th year — her fourth term — as mayor of Virginia Beach. Oberndorf was sworn into office on July 1, 1988 as the first directly-elected mayor, and the first woman mayor in the city's history. She served on City Council from 1976 until 1986 when she became vice mayor. She served as vice mayor until becoming mayor in 1988.

Oberndorf was instrumental in sponsoring the original referendum that called for the direct election of mayors. That referendum was approved by 98 percent of those who voted.

Oberndorf is married to Roger Oberndorf, a retired Coast Guard captain. She has two daughters and two grandchildren. She attended Old Dominion University.

Oberndorf said that she came back for a fourth term because she enjoys serving the people of Virginia Beach and has many more ideas she would like to implement to ensure that the city remains a wonderful place to live.

"I came to government because I thought in working with other people to make good things happen," said Oberndorf.

One of her primary goals as she begins the next term of office: e-government in Virginia Beach. She believes it would enable residents to access information, even meeting minutes, from City Council and various boards. Also, residents could pay parking tickets and take care of other administrative business with the city over the internet. Oberndorf noted that residents can come home in the middle of the night, and if they have seen a traffic light that has burned out, they can report it to Public Works.

"I'm very excited about establishing e-government to make government made available to people 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

"Virginia Beach is a marvelous city! The strongest part of the city is its citizens. I look forward with a great deal of enthusiasm and energy working with council and the public to keep the city at the top as far as management and prudent uses of public money."

Mayor Meyera Oberndorf

Oberndorf is pleased with the 19 new soccerfields that have gone into Princess Anne Park. She thanks Mike Barrett and the many others who have lobbied for those facilities.

The mayor has not given up the vision to protect and preserve Stumpy Lake. She hopes the city could form a partnership with Norfolk and Chesapeake, both of whom own pieces of the region. She would like to see a bike trail and a preserved park area.

"Virginia Beach is a marvelous city! The strongest part of the city is its citizens. I look forward with a great deal of enthusiasm and energy working with council and the public to keep the city at the top as far as management and prudent use of public money. I want to continue to do personal outreach."

Oberndorf has much cause for enthusiasm. For the 10th consecutive year, the FBI determined that Virginia Beach is the safest city with a population over 300,000. Also the received a AA+ bond rating from Moodys and Fitch.

Robert "Bob" Mandigo, an auditor with the U.S. General Accounting Office, will represent residents of the Kempsville District to City Council.

Mandigo and his wife, Cheri, an employee of the Virginia Beach Public Schools System, have four children. He

Cox senior wins Miss Virginia Beach crown

Felicia Hocker's platform issue is sexual abstinence until marriage

By Victoria Hecht
Editor

The newly-crowned Miss Virginia Beach 2000 is a soft-spoken young woman with big plans for the future.

Felicia Diana Hocker, 18, hasn't even finished her senior year of high school and is already preparing for state competition in Roanoke July 1.

If she wins the Miss Virginia title, Hocker will head to Atlantic City, N.J. for the Miss America Scholarship Pageant.

But that's putting the cart before the horse — first Hocker wants to get through with end-of-year exams, prom, graduation and a million other things.

She's still trying to get over the fact that she won Miss Virginia Beach on her first attempt. First crowned Miss Cox High School, one of the pageant's judges talked Hocker and two friends into participating in Miss Virginia Beach.

"So we went for it," said Hocker, whose only other foray into pageants was Miss Cox. Her sophomore year she grabbed first runner-up.

"That got me into it, but I'd never done one as big as Miss Virginia Beach or within the Miss America system."

Hocker made a good showing at Miss Virginia Beach, winning the swimsuit and talent portions of the competition to claim the title. For her talent, she sang "Because You Love Me."

Hocker's platform issue going into Miss Virginia is "Sexual Abstinence Until Marriage."

"It is something very close to my heart," she explained, "being that I have remained sexually abstinent. It's something I feel is so important, being that I want to go into youth ministry. It's something I can encourage teen-agers and young people to do. My parents have allowed me to grow up with morals and values."

As Miss Virginia Beach, Hocker is looking forward to sharing this message with her peers. She'll have the opportunity at the many speaking engagements Miss Virginia Beach makes during her reign.

"Among young people today, sexual abstinence has become less important in our value system," she noted.

When sharing her platform issue, Hocker will urge young people to make a public vow of abstinence.

"It has been shown that when teens

They're back! Legends live at the Beach

By Bob Ruegger

The Legends of the Beach program at the historic Francis Land House has annually celebrated the legends that have become a fascinating adjunct to the long, dramatic history of Virginia Beach.

Legends, of course, are stories that have been around for ages in one form or another. These tales somehow never become dusty or out of date because legends evolve from stories that are so well-loved that they are preserved and handed down from one generation to the next. Legends are tantalizing blends of fact and fiction that capture interest and fire the imagination. After several hundred years, it becomes virtually impossible to separate truth from fancy. Perhaps that distinction is what makes legends so enduring — and endearing.

Virginia Beach has more than its fair share of captivating legends; paramount among them are those that are generally associated with Grace Sherwood, the much-celebrated Witch of Pungo, and Blackbeard, the notorious pirate.

Vicki Harvey, museum educational specialist at the Land House, has organized and coordinated the annual Legends program for years. "I think the program gets better every year," contended Harvey. "I think the Virginia Beach-Princess Anne County history is an incredible history."

"If I had my way," said Harvey, "I'd get every person in Virginia Beach out here — they need to know about this city. The history is fantastic, it's interesting, and it's fun." Benjamin Cherry, who portrayed the infamous Blackbeard, traveled from Port of Plymouth, N.C. Cher-

OPERATION ABC MOBILIZATION

Report deadbeat drivers

If you've ever seen a child riding unbuckled in a vehicle and felt helpless to protect them, next week there is something you can do.

Starting Monday and continuing through Memorial Day, the National Safety Council is setting up a toll-free hotline for the public to identify vehicles with unbuckled children. The phone line will be in operation May 22-29 during Operation ABC Mobilization, the national law enforcement crackdown on deadbeat drivers — adults who disregard the law and fail to buckle up kids.

According to the National Safety Council, this Citizen Action Response Hotline is a way citizens can get involved in protecting children from one of the leading risks they face — riding unrestrained in a vehicle. It's the law in every state that children be buckled up.

Consider the statistics:

■ Seventy-eight percent of the public agrees that "people who fail to buckle up their child passengers should be guilty of child endangerment."

■ Thirteen percent of people who regularly drive admit they don't always buckle up child passengers.

■ Of those drivers who admit they don't always restrain kids, three out of four of them know it's against the law to permit a child to ride unbuckled and that traffic crashes are the number one reason for child death.

■ Sixty-six percent of deadbeat drivers admitted that the probability of a ticket and fine was the best way to get them to buckle up kids.

During the mobilization, officers in all 50 states will intensify enforcement of child passenger safety laws through checkpoints, saturation patrols and increased patrols. Citizens can help by dialing 1-800-764-5755 and identifying vehicles transporting an unbuckled child in violation of the law.

In turn, the National Safety Council will send a letter to the vehicle owners reminding them that permitting a child to ride unbuckled is dangerous. The letter also states that because it's the law that children be buckled, if they are stopped by the police they could be ticketed and fined. Once letters are sent, no records are kept and there is no further follow-up.

The hotline is patterned after similar existing programs in more than a dozen states and localities. In addition, there are numerous other state and local programs that enable citizens to report drunk, aggressive and unsafe drivers.

According to the National Safety Council, in the last three years Operation ABC Mobilization has significantly contributed to an increase in child restraint use and a decline in child fatalities.

But there is more work to do. One out of four children still rides unrestrained — meaning 15 million children are at deadly risk. Traffic crashes are the number one killer of children, and 60 percent who are killed in crashes are totally unrestrained. That doesn't have to happen. Because seat belts and child restraint systems are so effective, nearly half of those who die unbuckled in crashes would be alive today if the driver had made sure they were restrained.

Doesn't your most precious cargo deserve to be safely buckled in? Remember that during Operation ABC Mobilization.

Fax your letter today!

WHY THE 'LOVE BUG' VIRUS SPREAD SO QUICKLY...

Are municipal elections non-partisan or not?

Few civil actions filed to compel compliance with a city charter reach the level of a travesty of justice. But, Chesapeake just had one that did.

Dave Thomas, leader of Citizens for Southern Chesapeake, and Councilman Gene Waters sued the Republican Party and its candidates (not for money but for specific performance) to compel them to abide by the City Charter's non-partisan provision with regard to its municipal elections.

The complaint arose from the flagrant disregard of that requirement by Chesapeake's Republican Committee, who not only openly endorses its candidates for municipal offices but also places the words "Vote Republican" on all their literature and campaign signs. Their actions directly contradict the ruling of their own counterpart, the Virginia Beach Republican Committee, that has refused to even endorse its candidates unless their city charter is changed to allow partisan participation in the elections.

According to Councilman Waters (who was not running for office in the current election), this suit was only filed after every effort was made to allow the Republican Party to voluntarily comply. State Sen. Randy Forbes, chairman of Virginia's Republican Party, allegedly even refused to return Dave Thomas's phone calls to discuss the matter two days before the scheduled hearing on May 1.

The case was heard in Chesapeake Circuit Court by Chief Judge V. Thomas Forehand. The Chesapeake Republican Party was represented by Sen. Forbes himself and an attorney from his law firm, Kaufman and Canoles. Dave Thomas and Councilman Waters appeared "pro se," that is, without counsel.

The small number of citizens who even knew about this action figured that it was an open and shut case. Everywhere you looked in Chesapeake were billboards and smaller signs listing the names of candidates followed by larger lettering of what was obviously the sign's predominant message, "Vote Republican."

Ah — but common sense often flies out the window when politics walks through the courtroom door. Not only was it not a slam-dunk for the citizen plaintiffs, but the Forbes Machine won. Judge Forehand's decision was that the city charter referred to only the nominating process, not the election.

But what nominating process? Surely the judge didn't mean that the political parties (who are formed exclusively to support a partisan platform of governance) are capable of selecting their candidates on a non-partisan basis. But what else could the judge be referring to? No organization other than a political party nominates candidates for any elective office.

Perhaps the judge was referring to the fact that after the non-partisan provision was added to Chesapeake's Charter on July 1, 1985, Republican and Democratic candidates could no longer file their petitions of 125 signatures with their parties, but had to file directly with the Registrar's Office like the independent candidates did.

And, prior to the charter's amendment, the political parties' candidates were always listed by party first on the ballot followed by those who ran as independents. If the meaning of non-partisan in the city charter only meant the nominating process, then why did the city of Chesapeake remove all party identification from their ballots (in compliance with the governor's order that no party labels appear on the official ballots of non-partisan elections) following the change to the charter in 1985?

But this confused state of affairs gets worse, much worse. No sooner did Judge Forehand finish slapping the wrist of the citizen plaintiffs for misinterpreting the language of the charter than the GOP sued them for money damages. That's right, Senator Forbes filed a counter-suit on behalf of the Republican Party to recover of all things, his firm's legal fees to the tune of $1,530, plus $218 in costs and punitive damages of $500.

Why? Well, according to their complaint, the plaintiffs' motive for bringing the suit was merely to harass the defendants and to seek publicity. In addition, Councilman Waters was accused of being motivated by revenge because the Chesapeake Republican Party had refused to nominate him for City Council in previous elections.

First of all, all citizens, especially a council member, ought to be well within their rights to bring to the public's attention any action they perceive to be a violation of the Charter under which their community is governed. In fact, one could even argue that it is their civic duty.

Secondly, it makes zero sense that Councilman Waters (who overwhelmingly won his council seat, not only without the endorsement of the GOP but by defeating several of their candidates, including two whom were incumbents) would have any reason to seek revenge.

It is unbelievable that a civil action filed merely to enforce a provision in a city charter could have spiraled into such a travesty — but there is no question that the GOP's counter-suit has done so in spades. There is still hope that Chesapeake's Circuit Court could come to the rescue and dismiss this ridiculous counter-suit.

Unfortunately, it is not just average citizens but even powerful judges who have good reason to fear risking the ire of Senator Forbes, whose behind-the-scenes political power stretches far beyond the boundaries of Chesapeake.

So many questions, investigations, but where are answers?

The news is jumping off the television screen and newspaper pages so fast that it is hard to keep up with it. Every day it seems one country is fighting another, and I don't know why. We send troops to quell the violence, and I don't know why. The fighting continues. Riots and demonstrations have become a regularity and I don't know why. I wonder at times if many of the rioters and demonstrators know why. Then, there is the Congress.

Will Rogers once said, "About all I can say about the United States Congress is that it opens with a prayer and closes with an investigation."

He was apparently right about that. It seems to have more investigations than Scotland Yard and the FBI combined. Here are some that I remember over the past 10 years. The Jennifer Flowers investigation in which Bill and Hillary Clinton were interviewed on "60 Minutes" after Jennifer went public and claimed to have been Clinton's mistress for 12 years? Both denied the accusation and it faded away.

Was the death of Vince Foster murder or suicide? Hung jury. The improprieties in the White House Travel Office? Still an open case, but not active at this time. Whitewater? A biggie that is presently on hold. The FBI files? Who knows. The White House Coffee Club? The status on this one is on hold, but apparently dead. The Lincoln Bedroom Caper — who knows the outcome? The Paula Jones case? This was the one that started all the trouble.

The impeachment hearings regarding Bill Clinton and the subsequent trial in the United States Senate? Clinton beat the rap but many still wonder how he did it, even after trying to a federal grand jury. He didn't get the name "Slack Willie" for nothing.

Foreign money donations to Democrats and Al Gore's fund-raising telephone calls from his office along with his highly-publicized visit to the Buddhist Temple for a hand-out? How much? The attack on the Branch Davidians at Waco seems to have been a mistake. Only Janet Reno knows for sure and she's not talking.

A lot of tax money is being used in the Elian Gonzales case that could be used to feed the starving.

But this is typical of the Clinton administration. Clinton and Reno would rather use time and money to send one 6-year-old communist boy back to Cuba than feed thousands of starving people.

Welcome to the real world.

It's never too late to thank Mom

It's almost a week late, but my May would not be complete without an ode to Mom. Not just my mother, mind you, but moms all over the world.

On Sunday I celebrated my second official Mother's Day. Being that I'm "Mom" to 1.5 children (yes, I'm counting that one currently in the womb), I can now speak from experience that mothers have earned — and deserve — this special day.

What is a mother? Young or old, a mom is someone who always remains youthful in her children's eyes. Time may turn the hair gray and wrinkle the complexion, but Mom will always be that cheerful, caring lady who took time to blow soap bubbles with you though a sink of dishes needed washing.

Mom will always be the one who stayed up on long, hot, feverish nights to cool a child's sickly brow with damp washcloths.

Mom will always be the one to kiss the "boo boos" better, even the nastiest, messiest scrapes and scratches.

Mom will always be the one to chauffeur the children to their practices and recitals, birthday parties and sleepovers.

Mom will always be the one who doesn't mind a little baby slobber or spit up on her blouse, because they are the marks of a well-loved child.

Mom will always be the one who stands in the supermarket aisle reading each container of baby food to find the nutritional value and whether it's good for baby's tummy.

Mom will always be the one to change the dirtiest, stinkiest diapers — and smile and coo while doing it.

Mom will always be the one who wants to nestle against a soft, tender cheek and kiss that wonderful baby and toddler flesh.

Mom will always be the one who sees beauty in a pudding- and applesauce-splattered face.

And Mom will always be the one who doesn't mind that pudding- and applesauce-splattered child giving her a big kiss that lands halfway in her hair.

Mom will always be the one who has sticky little fingerprints on her new shirt, then tries to clean them off with a damp towel all to no avail.

Mom will always be the one who's willing to sit beside a sandbox for hours on end while her small child fills a bucket with sand — over and over again.

Mom will always be the one who marvels at her child's wonderful artwork and displays it proudly on the refrigerator, until there are so many pieces they fall off every time the fridge is opened.

Mom will always be the one who absolutely adores a new dress, but forgets it to buy her child an adorable outfit.

Mom will always be the one who "does without," period, so that her children won't have to.

Mom will always be the one to make five dozen cupcakes for the school bake sale with one night's notice.

Mom will always be the one who volunteers to go on school field trips, even if it means chasing overly-energetic fifth graders up and down battlefield hills.

Mom will always be the one to pack your lunch bag — and remain blissfully unaware that you traded your tuna sandwich for peanut butter and jelly.

Mom will always be the one who carries pacifiers and kids' meal toys in her purse, not to mention children's Tylenol, diaper rash ointment, a nasal aspirator and other assorted kiddie stuff.

Mom will always be "good old mom" as her children grow up and start dating, go away to school and eventually marry.

Mom will always be the example to which husbands measure their wives.

Mom will always be the one who gives her time, strength and last ounce of energy to keep the children and husband happy, well fed, tidily clothed and loved.

Mom will always be loved.

This is for you, my Mom, and all the millions of mothers out there. Great job, gals. Hope you relished your day!

Virginia Beach fishes for success with popular water pastime

Fishing is a multi-million dollar industry and has the largest impact on the state economy. It is estimated that in Virginia Beach alone, more than 300,000 fishermen a year experience the challenge of trying to catch the "big one."

The Mayor's Report

Mayor Meyer Oberdorf

Whether it be from the shore, the pier or a boat, casting a line into the water in hopes of catching a fish is a multi-faceted pastime for many visitors and locals alike. From the earliest days, prior to the English settlement in the New World, small bands of nomadic hunters roamed the area and supplemented their diet of game, plants and berries with the fish caught from the Chesapeake Bay and its tributary waters. Today, fishermen, whether commercial, sport, fresh or salt water, not only supplement their regular diet with fish they catch, but some like to exhibit their well-fought trophies.

Today, sport fishing, even more so than commercial fishing, is a profitable and enjoyable undertaking. From the first of May to the middle of October, people pay to fish from head boats (so named because they are charged per person or per "head"), charter boats (usually six people to a boat), rental boats varying in size and, of course, privately-owned boats. It is even estimated that 30,000 people pay to watch whales or dolphins.

In 1967, the first big boat sailed through Rudee Inlet and it is now the most used ocean inlet on the East Coast, annually plied by thousands of boats, many over 60 feet. Sport fishing people and boats coming through this inlet chase marlin, sailfish, tuna, wahoo, dolphin, amberjack and other grandiose gladiators out on the awesome Atlantic Ocean, while the head boats fish for bluefish, spanish mackerel, speckled trout, spadefish, sea bass, croaker, spot, tautog and sheepshead.

Marinas at Rudee Inlet include the Virginia Beach Fishing Center, the Rudee Inlet Station Marina and Fisherman's Wharf Charters.

Lynnhaven Inlet, just a few miles inside the Chesapeake Bay entrance, harbors one of the best populations of speckled trout on the coast. Lynnhaven Seafood Marina, Bubba's Marina and Long Bay Point Marina offers head boat and charter boat fishing.

The fishing season begins in late March, sometimes in February when hordes of common or "Boston" mackerel show up 10 to 15 miles off the resort strip.

Late April finds big bluefish in this same area. Not long afterwards, yellowfin tuna swim along the edge of the Continental Shelf with tautog and sea bass biting over coastal wrecks.

The off-shore, big-game season starts in earnest in late June when bill fish begin to prow the shelf between the Cigar and Norfolk Canyons. Dolphin are also around with both seasons running into October but peaking in August and September.

Bluefin tuna are usually 20 to 50 miles off shore in June with a seasonal peak in July. This is also when fishing peaks in these same areas for giant sharks.

Amblerjack show around coastal wrecks and towers in June, lingering until early October. In August and September, splendid numbers of cobia can be found around coastal buoys, including the string of "CB" buoys leading into the Chesapeake Bay.

King mackerel appears in near-shore waters in mid-summer, lingering through September. Small gray trout, get the inshore season started in May. By the end of June, boats sailing from Lynnhaven Inlet begin targeting small spot and croaker. Some of the better hauls are made along the bridge tunnel.

Croaker numbers begin to thin with the first cool northeast blow of late August or early September. Spot reach a peak at this time, when the season's biggest fish called "yellowbellies" are caught. Speckled trout catches in Lynnhaven and Rudee increase in September and October and can peak in early November. Also an upswing in tautog and sea bass action over coastal wrecks happens at this season.

More next week.

Lynnhaven House hosts Civil War encampment

Don't miss the excitement of a full weekend of "living history" Saturday, May 20 and Sunday, May 21 from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. during a realistic Civil War encampment by the Third Virginia Volunteers.

A special candlelight tour will be conducted from 8 to 10 p.m. Saturday at the historic Lynnhaven House, 4405 Wishart Rd. Combination a.m. and p.m. tickets are family $10; adults $5; and children, $2.50. Children under 5 admitted free. A.m., p.m. only tickets are also available. The fee includes a tour of the Colonial period Lynnhaven House with costumed guides (no reservations required). The Third Regiment of the Virginia Volunteer Infantry, some of whom appeared in the motion picture "Gettysburg" will set up and re-enact a tent encampment in Confederate uniforms with authentic weapons. Troops will drill, fire rifles, explain their weapons and uniforms as well as perform camp activities such as meal preparation. This is a good occasion to learn about camp life, ask questions and chat with people who know the answers.

Local arts advocate wins national award

Luci Talbot Cochran, associate director of Young Audiences of Virginia, received the Staff Person of the Year Award from the Board of National Young Audiences, the premier arts-in-education organization in the country.

Selected from the staff people of 32 chapters, comprising approximately 300 individuals, Cochran was recognized for her innovative ideas, dedication and leadership. Cochran received her award at an awards banquet in Boston, Mass. on April 29.

Young Audiences of Virginia, a chapter of National Young Audiences, is committed to preserving and transmitting the arts for future generations. Over 2000 Young Audiences of Virginia (YAV) programs a year are preserved throughout the state.

YAV brings professional dancers, musicians, actors, storytellers and visual artists into the schools through performances, workshops and residencies at all grade levels. The arts programming Young Audiences provides to children can be the innovative tool used to reach the non-traditional learners in a class, to create the project that turns a group of children and educators into a community, to break down cultural barriers, and to build relationships and teach the whole child.

The arts program YAV provides tie directly into Virginia's Standards of Learning and are a basic component of bringing up academically competitive, culturally literate children ready to join the workforce in the 21st century. Young Audiences of Virginia has been providing this unique service to young people through school libraries, museums and community organizations for the past 45 years.

Jennifer Jordan has a saying that dieters would well be advised to heed: "A loan consolidation to a budget is like a diet pill to weight. If you don't know how you got there and change your course; you will be right back where you started."

Jordan is in the business of seeing that others know what they're eating — hopefully the right things — and the impact on their bodies.

Her efforts recently garnered Jordan the state's Dietetic Technician of the Year honor. The award was presented at the annual conference of the Virginia Dietetic Association.

Jordan's passion for nutrition led the Virginia Beach resident back to college several years ago after a devastating car accident which left her in a coma and facing extensive rehabilitation. She graduated from the dietetics program at Tidewater Community College in 1997. Today, she's working on a bachelor's degree in health sciences from Old Dominion University.

"I had always wanted to be a registered dietitian and had heard about the program at TCC. As I got more into it, education played a big role. I decided I needed to have a degree that would transfer to a local university as well as anywhere on the East Coast," she said. "Getting my associates' at TCC gave me that opportunity."

Jordan is an unabashed advocate of healthy eating and exercise.

"We all have to eat, and we all have to move in some way, shape or form," she explained. "But if you make it fun, then people are more apt to do it. I want it to be a lifestyle change — not something they have to do. It's about choices. If people learning how to make choices comes naturally, then I feel I've succeeded as an educator."

Jordan knows getting others to change years of poor eating and lack of exercise is a challenge. First, however, she listens to what they have to say.

"I listen, then I talk and help change," she said.

Jordan said there is no common solution to fit everyone — no "one size fits all" in the world of nutrition and exercise. Individuals must tailor what is best for them.

"Not everyone is a vegetarian, for example," she said. "I have to incorporate things with how people already eat. That's why I like the herbs and spices that can add something new and exciting."

Another simple rule of thumb she says most people can follow: Put down the remote control and get up to change the channel.

"And limit yourself as to how often the television is on," she added.

As a nutrition educator, Jordan often poses a question to students which leaves them puzzled — what's the first thing one should look at on a food label in the supermarket. Nutrition? Calories? Fat content? Salt grams?

"Wrong!" "It's the serving size," she smiled, noting most people don't know proper portions. "How much meat, for example, do you think you need in a day?"

The answer: two three-ounce servings — just six ounces of meat per day. Consider that the next time you're sitting down to that 16-ounce ribeye steak for dinner.

"And what else are you putting with that?" she wondered. "Portosues are great, but not the butter or sour cream. Actually, salsa is very good on a potato. It's not a big change, but it makes such a difference later on."

Another startling revelation. According to Jordan, only 9 percent of Americans get the recommended five fruits and vegetables per day.

"And we wonder why we spend so much on health care in the United States for massive heart attacks and strokes!" she said. Jordan believes proper nutrition is the best — and easiest — preventive measure.

"A lot of health problems are genetic, but if we can start training and educating at an earlier age, so people are aware of what they're doing to their bodies, that would be the ideal," she said.

She believes the key is teaching children proper nutrition at a very early age and making it fun.

"It's about a different way of eating," she noted.

Being state Dietetic Technician of the Year will help get her message out even more. She will be recognized along with other state winners in the September issue of the American Dietetic Association's (VDA) national publication.

She is also the incoming dietetic technician representative on the VDA state board of directors. Jordan's work also earned her the VDA's Public Policy Award in 1999 for lobbying to promote medical nutrition therapy to federal legislators.

During presentation of that award, it was said of Jordan that she "has accomplished more in her short time as a diet tech than many will do in their entire careers."

Name: Jennifer Swann Jordan.

What brought you to this area:

Up close and personal

Jennifer Jordan: Food for the brain

Pets: Rachel, my niece (ha ha).

Hobbies: Gardening, herbal cooking, sewing, computers and making vinegars, murtards and salsas.

Ideal vacation: To travel in the mountains of Virginia staying at bed and breakfast inns and taking hikes along the Appalachian Trail daily and visiting the local markets/museums in the area.

Pet peeves: "Health insurance" companies.

First job: Waitress at summer church camp.

Least liked job: When I was locked in a room and my direct supervisor wouldn't let me out until I told her why I didn't like her.

Favorite sports teams: Wildcats! University of Kentucky basketball.

Favorite musicians: Delirious, Stephen Curtis Chapman, Garth Brooks, Diana Ross, Tina Turner, BeeGees, Beach Boys and Alabama.

Most embarrassing moment: When I was younger and we were on vacation and the weatherman said there was a 70 percent chance of rain. Everybody was like, "OK, it's going to rain," but I said, "No, we might be in the 30 percent it doesn't rain on."

How I would like to be remembered: "She listened, then taught and gave to others."

If I received $1 million: I would take my business. All About & For You, and rent the little house at the Farmer's Market and hold education classes on fresh fruits and vegetables, healthy eating and outdoor activities. I'd carry the classes to businesses as incentive for their employees. Then, in January, I'd go visit my grandmother for a month.

If I had 10 minutes on national television: I would say that weight is to nutrition what your checkbook is to your total budget. You need to check what you take in and spend daily. But financial security is more than what you spend daily and earn — it is what you do with it over time. The same is true of weight. How many people have you known that have nice clothes, cars and a house, but financially they are in bad shape? Many of us struggle with weight but do we know our cholesterol, LDL, HDL, triglycerides, glucose and BMI? Do we understand free radicals, antioxidants, vitamins and supplements and how they react with medications? The answers are found through education that, unfortunately, we don't receive in school. One of the greatest gifts we receive is "ourselves" — what we do and how we take care of ourselves is our gift back to God. How is your checkbook of life?

"We all have to eat, and we all have to move in some way, shape or form. But if you make it fun, then people are more apt to do it. I want it to be a lifestyle change."

Jennifer Jordan, nutrition educator

My dad started to work with the government with computers in 1967.

Hometown: Burlington, N.C.

Age: 41.

Nickname: Gigi. We all (five kids) had nicknames. When we moved to Virginia I decided I would go to Jennifer and be a lady. In North Carolina, they called me GI Joe because I was such a tomboy. Then when working at ChiChi's I went back to Gigi at work only.

Occupation: Nutrition educator.

Marital Status: Divorced.

Children: Nicole, 19, works full time at Sports Authority.

Favorite movie: 'E.T.'

Favorite authors: VC Andrews, Steven Covey, Robert Schuller, Joyce Meyer and Danielle Steele.

Favorite night out on the town: The Wells Theater for a play and walk along downtown Norfolk, or dancing, dancing, dancing.

Favorite restaurants: Blue Crab and Bangkok Garden.

Favorite meal and beverage: Margaria, salad and crab legs.

What most people don't know about me: I like to be by myself. It doesn't mean that I am mad or sad — I just enjoy it.

Best thing about myself: When a door closes, I can always find a window that's open.

Worst habit: Saying "Do you know what I mean?"

Top teacher's passion is classroom

By Victoria Hecht
Editor

A banner in Marilyn Jernigan's third-grade classroom at Christopher Farms Elementary School proclaims "We are the world's best class!"

While that not quite official, one thing is for sure: Jernigan is Virginia Beach's best teacher.

A career educator, Jernigan was named Virginia Beach Teacher of the Year during a surprise visit by Superintendent Dr. Timothy Jenney.

The announcement may have come as a shock to Jernigan, but it's not surprising the selection committee chose her as "best of the best" from a pool of 84 nominees — one for each school in the city.

Jernigan has known since she was a young girl what path her life would take.

"I think it was third grade when I made this decision, and I never changed my mind. Even though all the Career Days came and went, nothing else was an option," said Jernigan, who has taught at Christopher Farms since its opening three years ago.

The first of her family's daughters to attend college, Jernigan remembers her father sending newspaper clippings to her dorm relating the plight of jobless teachers.

"But since I've gotten my degree, he's been my greatest supporter," said Jernigan, who earned a bachelor's degree in education from Virginia Tech and a master's from the College of William and Mary.

A native of Springfield, she immediately went to work for the Virginia Beach public school system — 23 years ago — and has been there since.

"Someone told me, 'Go to Virginia Beach because they have a transient community,'" she recalled. Hoping jobs would be plentiful, she applied and was immediately hired.

"Back then it was the late '70s. Working in Northern Virginia wasn't even a remote possibility," she said.

Jernigan settled in quickly and grew to love her adopted hometown. She has taught at Norfolk Landing, Salem, Stawbridge and Princess Anne Elementary schools.

She likes working with elementary-aged children best and found her niche with third graders.

"Multiplication is a biggie in this grade. They also start to write in cursive. They are eager to learn all of that," she said.

TOP TEACHER! Marilyn Jernigan, a 23-year veteran of Virginia Beach City Public Schools, was named Teacher of the Year during a surprise visit by Superintendent Dr. Timothy Jenney. Jernigan likes to take time for each of her third-grade students, such as 9-year-old Chris Jones as he works on a creative art piece.

Jernigan, a resident of Chesapeake, is equally eager to challenge them.

According to Selection Committee chairperson Margaret Buxton, that is one of the qualities which made her stand out. She also noted Jernigan's "high degree of creativity in enhancing the academic program for all the children with whom she works."

"I want every child to walk through the door wanting to be here," Jernigan explained, "and I want them to leave with a big smile on their face ready to come back the next day. Because of that, they're going to learn something."

To enhance learning, Jernigan "tries to make it fun" through games, especially in math.

"Math is my background and expertise. Hopefully it emanates from this room that there's math going on in here. We team teach, so I teach math twice a day — once in my classroom and once across the hall. Other teachers will call on me if they have a certain question about math or a way to teach it.

"I try to teach math so it's problem-solving based and hands-on with manipulatives. One of my goals is that no one knows or thinks that they're wrong. There really is no wrong answer — I may be how you're going about it that needs tweaking," she said.

Jernigan isn't sure what convinced the Selection Committee to pick her for Teacher of the Year, but she feels they may have noted her unique way of questioning and working with the children.

"I encourage them to strike out on their own and find what works for them. I think that helps them — they'll leave knowing a lot more than they did when they came in September."

Jernigan believes a good teacher possesses three qualities — love of children, patience and willingness to go out of one's way to help each child.

She hopes her influence has rubbed off on each of the 20 youngsters in her class.

One thing is for certain, they are proud of their teacher.

"They're incredibly happy," Jernigan smiled.

She admits it was a chaotic moment when Jenney showed up to award her to the honor.

"Five children wanted to go the bathroom, there were kids here and there. Then Dr. Jenney walked in and there were all these cameras. I can honestly say nothing has shocked me more."

Jernigan still can't get over it.

"I know I'm a good teacher, but the best at the Beach? This building alone is filled with wonderful teachers. Just to be honored for the school is enough. I believe anyone from this school could step into the role of Teacher of the Year and play it as well."

Jernigan says the honor is a heady experience, but she will carry on as usual.

"I just want to be here for the children," she said.

She is a little nervous about one responsibility the title brings — making speeches.

"My greatest fear is giving a speech to a large group of adults. I'm used to talking to children!" she smiled.

A mother of two boys, Jernigan's other honors include the Presidential Award for Excellence in Mathematics and Science Teaching (state level) and William C. Lowry Outstanding Mathematics Teacher of the Year.

In 1989, Jernigan was named North Landing Elementary's Teacher of the Year. In 1992, she also earned that title at Strawbridge Elementary.

Jernigan has served in several leadership roles and was a clinical faculty member of the Virginia Collaborative for Excellence in the Preparation of Teachers at Norfolk State University.

Kaufman Prize runner-up

Shelley-Ann Tenia of Virginia Beach was honored as Old Dominion University's runner-up for the Kaufman Prize at the Student Honors and Awards Banquet. The $5,000 award was established by the Landmark Communications to acknowledge graduating seniors who have exerted exceptional and constructive influence on the university, its students or the community by demonstrating the highest qualities of leadership and service. Tenia, who received a bachelor's degree in psychology, graduated with a 3.66 grade point average. She served as a volunteer tutor at a homeless shelter, a reading buddy at Rosemont Elementary, a Sunday school teacher at Atlantic Shores Baptist Church and was president of the Canterbury Center for Episcopal Campus Ministry. She was also a member of Alpha Phi Omega and Phi Theta Kappa honor societies. Tenia, left, had her photo taken with Janis Sanchez-Hucles, professor of psychology.

YMCA Prayer Breakfast features author, pastor

The YMCA of South Hampton Roads will host its sixth annual Prayer Breakfast on Thursday, June 1 from 6:30 to 8:30 a.m. at the Founders Inn and Conference Center in Virginia Beach. The event is co-sponsored by Hampton Roads United Christians and Regent University.

The featured keynote speaker is John Maxwell, a former pastor and author of more than 20 books including New York Times and Wall Street Journal bestseller, "The 21 Irrefutable Laws of Leadership."

The sixth annual Prayer Breakfast is part of the YMCA's effort to fulfill its mission to put Judo-

Christian principles into practice through programs that build a healthy spirit, mind and body. The event's co-sponsors, Hampton Roads United Christians and Regent University, are dedicated to spiritual renewal and higher education based on a Christian foundation.

Tickets are required for the event and cost is $15 per person or $125 for a table of 10. Fellowship begins at 6:30 a.m., with breakfast at 7 a.m. For more information about the sixth annual YMCA Prayer Breakfast or how to purchase tickets call Ed Lee, 622-9622, or visit your local YMCA branch.

Everybody loves Beverly, too

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

That sil-com has it all wrong.

It's not Raymond everybody loves, not in Virginia Beach City Hall anyway, but Beverly Hook.

Now the Virginia Municipal Clerks Association has come in on the act, too. It has recognized Hook as the Municipal Clerk of the Year.

Hook, chief deputy city clerk in Virginia Beach, was presented a plaque last week in honor of her first clerkship by Sharon Cassell, city clerk of Wytheville (population 8,038), who is also president of the Virginia Municipal Clerks Association.

Hook is the sort of person who thanks people when she does them a service or favor. She's been in City Clerk Ruth Hodges Smith's office for 18 years, three as chief deputy, and has attracted only good will.

Sometimes it's hard to ask her for something for fear she won't have the information immediately and will worry over not having it.

One co-worker once said that the others in the office sort of line up in her quarter to "protect" her from people who might otherwise take advantage of her good nature.

The award, Cassell said, is based on individual job performance, a positive attitude and a commitment to growth. Hook is a certified municipal clerk and is on her way to becoming a master municipal clerk, an accomplishment held by Smith and one of only 60 of the 10,372 clerks world-wide. Smith also received the clerk of the year award in 1987.

Earlier during the year, Brenda Brittingham was recognized by City Manager James K. Spore, for her efforts during the Y2K effort beyond the confines of duty. She received a plaque.

Deputy Clerk Charlotte "Char" Dolan was admitted to the Mayor's Hall of Fame for exemplary employees.

Deputy Clerk Barbara Palasthy also recently became a certified municipal clerk.

Older Adult Day activities slated at Y

The YMCA's in South Hampton Roads are honoring senior adults this month by providing programs to enrich the mind, body and spirit. YMCAs across the nation recognize May 31, as Older Adult Day. Area YMCAs have developed programs throughout the month to encourage older adults to continue to develop all aspects of their lives.

"YMCA programs for older adults strengthen the whole person. Socializing and volunteering, for example, have been shown to have positive effects on the health of older adults, while exercise has proven to promote mental agility, in addition to longevity and good health," says Don Kyzer, director of the YMCA of the USA.

Character Development and Older Adult Program Development for the YMCA of the USA. Several YMCAs in the area will be hosting a variety of events such as health fairs and screenings, group walks, fitness class demonstrations, field trips and motivational speakers. Some examples of the activities at various branches include:

■ Tuesday, May 23, Mt. Trashmore Family YMCA, Trip to Camp Silver Beach, 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Call 456-9622 for more details.

■ Thursday, May 25, Chesapeake Family YMCA, Road Rally, 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Call 547-9622 for more details.

■ Sunday, May 21, Wednesday, May 31, Effingham Family YMCA, Health Fair, 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. Call 399-5111 for more details.

Public Notice

At a session of said Circuit Court held in the County of Eaton, Michigan on April 6, 2000, PRESENT: The Honorable Calvin E. Osterhaven, Circuit Court Judge.

This matter is before the Court on Plaintiff's Ex-Parte Motion for Substitute Service.

The Court having found that Plaintiff has set forth sufficient facts showing that process cannot reasonably be served upon Defendant in the usual manner provided by MCR 2.105(A)(1); that alternative service by publication for 4 consecutive weeks is reasonably calculated to give potential Defendant actual notice of the proceedings and an opportunity to be heard; and being otherwise fully advised in the premises the Court Grants Plaintiff's Motion.

NOW THEREFORE: IT IS HEREBY ORDERED THAT Plaintiff shall serve process upon Defendant by publishing the following notice in the Virginia Beach Sun, on May 12, 19, 26 and June 2, 2000 and proof of publication shall be filed with this court.

TO: Thomas J. Marko

1. You are being sued by plaintiff in this court to quiet title to property commonly known as 7452 Windsor Highway, situated in Windsor Township, Eaton County, Michigan.

2. You must file your answer or take other action permitted by law in this court at the court address of 1045 Independence Blvd., Charlotte, NC 28214 8813 on or before June 30, 2000.

Incumbents, newcomers' goals

indicates that he wanted to make a difference in the community where he has lived most of his life, since, he notes, city government touches people's lives directly in more ways than the state and federal governments do.

"I felt I could do a better job than the occupant (Don Weeks) of the Kempville seat," said Mandigo.

He noted that it is his desire to restore the public's faith in elected representatives.

"I intend to make the best decisions I can make for city, to help us move forward with quality jobs for our residents, and to ensure integrity of physical environment."

Mandigo brings with him experience he believes will be valuable to residents.

"I bring 24 years of evaluating and assessing various federal budgets and programs, and the techniques that go with that. These are tools that will be very useful in monitoring city government to ensure that taxpayers are getting their money's worth," explained Mandigo. "The other thing is that I think I have an ability to listen to others and to express my thoughts when there might not be 100 percent agreement with me."

Mandigo is taking a realistic approach to his new position. He states that rather than jumping in with both feet, he is going to take some time to learn how things work with the Council, and to solicit feedback from residents.

"I have been invited to City Council events before I take office. I'm going to attend all of them if I can. There is a large learning curve, so I want to see how things are done before I take office. I feel like that's the best way to prepare," Mandigo explained.

Like his colleagues, he indicated that he is looking forward to working with City Council.

"I feel that everyone on council has been very friendly. I am confident that we can work together."

On the campaign trail, Mandigo learned that Virginia Beach has many very involved citizens who care very much about their city.

"I learned that they want to be heard," Mandigo said. "I'm going back through his campaign notes to identify problems and issues that voters told me about during the campaign to find ways to deal with them to the extent I can to find the appropriate solutions."

The solution he sees immediately is being accessible to his constituents. "I'll be accessible by telephone or fax so folks can contact me about ideas and concerns I will be very involved."

Rosemary Wilson is a newcomer to City Council, but not to Virginia Beach politics. She has served on the School Board, where she chaired the fiscal review committee. She and her husband, Tom, have raised two daughters and are raising their niece.

Someone who loves challenges, Wilson was an elementary school teacher. She also worked with Saudi Arabian women, teaching them English. She was in the coffee business for several years and is a realtor.

Wilson described her move from the School Board to City Council.

"I worked very hard and felt like I had done a really good job on the School Board," Wilson said. "I reached the goals I had for the School Board and knew it was time for me to do something different. I thought City Council would be something I could do well with."

Of Wilson's accomplishments during her service on the School Board, she is most proud of the substance abuse prevention program.

The program received the Virginia Municipal League's 1999 Achievement Award for being most innovative and cost-effective program. The program gives second chances to students caught with alcohol or drugs, or who realize, themselves that they have a substance abuse problem and turn themselves in for help.

This program has had a 95 percent success rate. Prior to this program, the schools were putting such students in programs costing $400,000 each year, and it only had 125 slots. More than 200 students have gone through the substance abuse prevention program each year, and it only costs approximately $80,000 per year.

Wilson noted that she has a heart for at-risk children. She worked with as suspension intervention programs, anti-tobacco programs and school bus disciplinary actions which helped cut down school discipline problems by two thirds, in addition to her many other duties as a school board member.

She has great hopes for City Council as well. "First of all, I believe we live in a great city," she said. "It's clean, there's a very low crime rate, our taxes in relative terms are fairly low, considering what we get in return and the quality of life we have here."

Some changes that Wilson would like to see are better communication between the citizens and the city government. "I really believe in strong input from the public and interaction with the public. I'd like to see better communications between the public and the governing body," Wilson reflects. "I campaigned also on education and economic development, because you can't have one without the other."

She believes the tax burdens on homeowners is too great. Her desire is to work with her fellow council members and the mayor on projects like the advanced technology center that will make the City more attractive to potential businesses.

One of Wilson's goals is to develop a citizens' panel to evaluate public/private partnerships. This panel would look at all the current partnerships and do an annual report card on how they're doing. She notes that these partnerships give cities advantages as they compete nationally to attract corporations.

Margaret Eure has served residents of the Centerville District for the past two years. She is looking forward to serving her first four-year term.

Eure has been a lifelong Tidewater resident. She and her husband, Jay, a retired business owner, have two sons.

She is excited about working with the new City Council. She said that she has a very good working relationship with the mayor, and evidence, she cites the fact that the mayor has appointed her to nine advisory boards in the 11 years Eure has been involved with the city.

One of the main goals Eure has for her the upcoming four years is preserving green areas.

"We are hoping to have private owners sell or even donate open land, especially in the northern part of the city, for preservation purposes, parks and green areas."

Eure is also interested in bringing residents into the public debate. She notes that she is slightly discouraged by the low voter turnout in the last election, and minimal citizen participation in City Council meetings, which are open to the public. She hopes that programs such as "e-government" will involve citizens to a greater degree.

Reba McClanahan enjoyed a peaceful campaign season as the unopposed candidate for the Rose Hall City Council District seat. She has served on City Council for 16 years cumulatively. There was a four-year gap in her service around the time she ran for mayor in 1980, but since that time, she has continued to serve.

McClanahan and her husband, Glen, a Virginia Beach attorney, have three children. She has lived in Virginia Beach for 38 years.

She is looking forward to a productive sixth term, and is excited about the new dynamics of this council.

"I don't anticipate any problems. This should be exciting we have two new people, and new people add interesting dimension, whether you agree or disagree, it causes you to re-think your own thinking."

McClanahan echoes Eure's interest in improving quality of life through preservation.

"I would like to see us zero in on improving our ordinances, specifically how we operate concerning the infilled properties available for development, so we don't affect the property around it in a negative way," said McClanahan. "I would like to see the city use the land we still have for development in a positive manner, looking at the quality of life as well as tax return."

Public input is a high priority for McClanahan, just as it is for her colleagues.

"Keeping the public involved in decision-making as you get bigger it gets harder," McClanahan explains. "At times you get officials who don't want to be bothered with public. We can't have that. We want make sure that not only do we listen, but that our staff listens to the citizens as well."

McClanahan advocates periodic monitoring of development plans in order to ensure they are serving the purpose for which they were created.

"I think you need to reassess where you are in your planning periodically to account for gradual shifts. We must keep an eye on what its residents feel is most important."

McClanahan's also indicate a concern about the lack of diversity on many City bodies.

"Too many boards and commissions are made up of too many white males," said McClanahan. "We need to have more diversified boards and commissions."

McClanahan clarified that this is simply a matter of fairness in today's society. She does believe that this city leadership, with a woman mayor and a female majority on City Council is exciting.

Legends live on at Beach

ry has been an integral part of the Legends evening since its inception and seemed as comfortable at the Land House as Blackbeard would have been aboard Queen Anne's Revenge.

"The history of Virginia Beach is a very colorful, interesting history, including the pirates, the witch, the Indians and all sorts of fascinating things that were a part of early America," Cherry said. "Legends of the Beach gives the local people — whether they're natives, here with the military, passing through, or just visiting — information about some of the specifics of Virginia Beach history."

"I think the word 'Legends' summarizes why this program has been so successful," said Cherry. "We all like to think about and believe in things that are beyond what we consider part of our everyday, ordinary world."

"Very little history is known about Blackbeard. Most of the history that we get about Blackbeard comes from a few ships' logs and legends, stories that have been passed along," Cherry noted.

"Legends is a great name to incite interest and excitement among the people."

The only physical description of Blackbeard that is known to exist came from a court deposition given in 1717 by Henry Bostock, a man held as a prisoner by the notorious pirate. Bostock described Blackbeard as a "tall, spare man" with a "very black beard which he wore very long."

"That's all the description that we have of Blackbeard. Anything else is based upon those legends, stories, and lore that we were talking about," Cherry emphasized.

"All the pictures that we have come from men's imaginations. No one that ever saw Blackbeard described him or drew him or painted him — with the exception of Henry Bostock."

Nonetheless, Cherry has been pleased to hear his local admirers say that he looks "just like Blackbeard."

"Well, we don't know what Blackbeard looked like, but the fact that I have been able to develop a character that they think looks like Blackbeard makes me feel good," Cherry smiled with obvious satisfaction.

Cherry believes that Blackbeard's eminence as the embodiment of evil, the very Devil himself, was largely a concept generated by the pirate himself — part of what Cherry calls Blackbeard's "master plan."

"Generally, when we think of pirates, Blackbeard is one of the first that we think about, and that's because of the image that Blackbeard created," said Cherry. Image was everything and Blackbeard was his own public relations director. Tying ribbons in his beard and lighting slow matches under his hat were simply props intended to enhance his look of ferocity before battle. These purposeful contrivances, combined with a malignant gaze, caused his victims to accept — usually without question — that he had a working relationship with the Devil.

In spite of Blackbeard's bloodthirsty, ruthless image as a pirate captain, it has never been documented (other than during the Battle of Ocracoke Inlet when he was fighting for his life) that this legendary pirate took a human life. "Historically, Blackbeard never killed anyone," Cherry contended.

Starr Donlon assumed the persona of Mistress Elizabeth Burwell of Gloucester, a friend of the NATIVE SETTLEMENT SITE. Joy Ellissen, Land House educator, describes the excavation of an ancient Chesapeake Indian settlement off Great Neck Road.

Thoroughgoods, for the Legends evening at the Land House.

"So many times when people think of coming to Virginia Beach, they think about the beaches and the Marine Science Museum — and then they go up to Williamsburg to have a day of history," said Donlon. "They often forget that there is a great deal of history here. In fact, this started earlier than Williamsburg."

"Really, what we're looking at here is very early history at its best. We have some wonderful interpreters willing to tell people just what it was like to live back then," Donlon remarked. "So it's a very good place to be and certainly, I think, the first stop if a person wants to really grasp the full scope of the historic trail."

Irene Halle began her interpretation of Grace Sherwood, the famous Witch of Pungo, many years ago at the Adam Thoroughgood House. In recent years, she has portrayed the indomitable witch for the Legends affair at the Land House.

"It's wonderful to be able to take part in this. The children are excited about this sort of thing, and it's just a thrill," said Halle.

She credited relatively new techniques in depicting history, such as living history interpretation, for the recent increase in interest that the public has in things historic in general and in the fascination for her persona in particular.

"Well, the odd little stories about Grace Sherwood are certainly fun — the things that she was supposed to have done," said Halle. "How far back in history do you have to go to find a time when people were not interested in something that was supernatural or strange — magic, ghosts, all that sort of thing?"

Halle characterized the quality of the historic interpretation at the Land House as "wonderful." She also credited Vicki Harvey for organizing the Legends program and gathering the right people to interpret the personas.

As in years past, hundreds of local residents enjoyed participating in the annual Legends of the Beach event at the Land House.

Among the local folks who participated in the program were Rose Reason and Dawn Brown.

"I think it's great. I've had a good time so far," said Reason.

"We've seen Blackbeard and the Witch of Pungo," she noted. "I've just had a great time, and we've haven't even gotten in the house yet."

Dawn Brown also seemed pleased with the experience that the program provided. "I like it. I brought my three kids here today, and they're very interested in the history in the area," said Brown. "It's just kind of neat to see what went on around here a long time ago, and the kids can learn about the history in this immediate area."

Jerry Mazanowski, a first-time participant in the annual program, commented, "It's pretty neat. I've got three little kids and they're enjoying it. Every exhibit has been interesting; some are more interesting than others."

Mazanowski particularly enjoyed Blackbeard's performance.

"He's doing a good job over there, acting out the part," he remarked.

Lucia Forte was particularly enthusiastic about the Legends celebration. "I thought it was wonderful — very informative," said Forte. "It was geared toward the children, but it was very informative for all ages," she noted. "And I thought that they were very flexible and answered a lot of questions, especially for the children but also for the adults."

"They covered everything from historical fact to fiction. They were very authentic in their dress and style, even in their speech," Forte remarked.

Forte particularly seemed to relish the encounter she and her son Tony had with the Witch of Pungo.

Jo Dee Messina

Two-time CMA award nominee Jo Dee Messina will perform on Sunday

"I have a real problem with being honest...I can't not be! I was raised in a very connected community, where everyone was approachable and friendly. Everyone was honest — so I have a difficult time with things that aren't real. That's just the way I was raised, and it's who I am."

When it came time to record "I'm Alright," Jo Dee Messina's already gold sophomore album, she had a lot of ground to cover.

With her breakthrough "Heads Carolina, Tails California" and follow-up Top 5 smash "We're Not In Kansas Anymore," the copper-haired firebrand soared into the role of next superstar. But the dissolution of her management company and other circumstances conspired to undermine the ground she'd gained and Messina eventually found herself teetering on the brink of bankruptcy.

"It's all life — and you can't take anything for granted," Messina says philosophically. "All you can do is keep working, keep believing and be grateful that you can use those trials to put back into the music."

Working closely with her good friends and co-producers Byron Gallimore and Tim McGraw, Messina spent nearly two years seeking out songs that reflected her will to live and thrive, to be true to oneself — and the faith and commitment required to see one's dreams through.

"These songs are very survival-oriented," says the two-time Country Music Award nominee, addressing the 10 songs on "I'm Alright."

"As I sing 'em and as people hear 'em, it's a strength thing that you hear in my music. When I hear these songs, they actually change my mood — when I'm down, I listen to 'I'm Alright' and the energy just lifts me up, the lyric carries me along."

"To me, the songs have to say something I can relate to or would actually say. I have to be able to represent it and I have to be able to feel it. Otherwise, I'm not doing myself or the song any justice."

Messina knows what she speaks of. Her energy, passion and joy for living infuse songs she sings with a power and an infectiousness that's undeniable. When people hear her full-throttle commitment to the music she makes, they can't help but respond.

As a result she's spent over 10 percent of the past year sitting at number one on the charts with "I'm Alright" first singles; two weeks with "Bye, Bye," then three weeks with "I'm Alright."

And those two chart-toppers are merely the surface of an album that's both complex and comforting.

Whether it's the resigned heartbreak-into-action-into-healing of Messina's own "No Time For Tears," a freewheeling on Grammy-winner Marc Cohn's paean to automotive nirvana "Silver Thunderbird," or the hushed real life commentary of "Even God Must Get the Blues," Messina weaves the conversational intimacy normally reserved for old friends.

"Hey, I like people," she laughs. "My character is to give. It's not about being a success in the music business, it's about doing for others and giving of one's self. When I'm out there and people say my songs touch them, help them, maybe change their life, that's why I do it! It gives the music a purpose and me a reason for doing this."

"My mom's the same way. So you could say I get it from her."

When she graduated from high school, Nashville was a foregone conclusion.

Messina struck out for Music City, knowing no one and determined to make her mark on country music. Like so many hopeful, initial success was elusive, so Messina took to looking for breaks and picking up money singing in the various talent contests that draw the aspiring and the delusional.

"I was hanging out at the Pink Elephant, where they had these

The Barkays: the legend continues

Fire, smoke, vibrant costuming, and even a live, 12-foot Python snake are all just part of what's in store for audiences these days at a typical stage performance by The Barkays.

Spontaneity and excitement have been a trademark of the group ever since their inception in the late '60s and today's Barkays have boosted their high-energy act into an even higher gear for the new millennium crowd—an energy that's sure to be equally present on their upcoming new CD.

While the musical tastes of the fans have evolved many times since the band's origination, The Barkays have proven no strangers to evolution.

Beginning as a house band with Stax Records in Memphis in 1966, their potent, dynamic sound would carry them to a chart-topping perch the very next year with their first smash single, "Soul Finger."

It was that dynamism that landed them the spot as the back-up group for the legendary "soul" singer Otis Redding on his final worldwide tour. That tour, however, was to have a disastrous finale, as Redding and four members of the band would perish in a tragic plane accident.

The young surviving members, James Alexander and Ben Cauley, then reformed the band, with the help of Allen Jones who became their producer and manager. In the rebuilding process, there would be no diminishing of the standards of professionalism and showmanship.

Among those recruited would be Larry Dodson, who would evolve into not only another pillar of the band (as well as lead singer), but the corner stone of their future.

Soon the new Barkays were the premiere house band for Stax Records.

Throughout the '70s, they would be backing up some of the most distinguished names in R&B music.

However, The Barkays ran a string of their own hits pioneering a trail in the "funk" music genre, including, "Shake Your Rump to the Funk," "Attitude," "Move Your Boogie Body," "Sex-O-Matic," "Anticipation," "Holy Ghost," "Freakshow On The Dance Floor," "Hit and Run," "She Talks to Me With Her Body," "Too Hot to Stop" and many other hit singles.

In the late '80s after more than 20 years of the grueling demands, James Alexander left The Barkays. Shortly thereafter, another mainstay producer/manager, Allen Jones, passed away. The Barkays decided to take a hiatus.

It was in 1991 that Alexander and Dodson, along with Harvey Henderson and Winston Stewart, would "evolve" the group once again. They went to great lengths to insure that it retained the freshness and vitality of the original Barkays while adapting the flair and persona of the '90s.

Soon they were back in the studio for another album—"48 Hours" on Basis Music. They broke new ground with the single, "The Slide," which was widely accepted by enthusiastic dance fans and resulted in strong

The Barkays signed with Curb Records and put together one of their tastiest and most zesty albums. Produced in Memphis by James Alexander, Larry Dodson, Bryan Smith and Kurt Clayton, the C.D., which was loaded with intriguing production, subliminal voices and, of course, "funk" flavor made world famous by the group.

With a career total of 25 L.P.s, including five gold and 1 platinum, and 20 Top Ten singles, The Barkays can expect to add to those figures, and expand on their legendary status.

Paul Rodgers

Paul Rodgers of Bad Company will 'cut loose' for Jubilee-goers

As one of rock 'n' roll's most distinctive vocalists, Paul Rodgers first came to prominence in 1968 as a member of the seminal blues group Free. A youthful Rodgers struggled to establish a foothold within London's highly competitive music scene.

He was ready to return home before an act of fate reversed his fortunes.

"I came down from Middlesbrough, the industrial heartland of the North East of England, with a band called the Roadrunners," remembers Rodgers.

"We changed our name to the Wild Flowers. We had come to London to hit the big time and promptly starved! We were on the road to a gig that was going to pay 30 quid — which was really big money for us — but we had forgotten to put oil in the engine and it seized up on the way. That was the final straw. Everybody got out of the van and started hitching home.

"I was actually on my way home with them, but I suddenly thought, 'You know, I don't want to go back home.' So I walked across the road and started hitching back the other way. That was the 'crossroads' for my career."

Determined to establish himself, Rodgers returned to London and formed the blues band Brown Sugar. Soon after the group began, his dynamic voice was recognized by guitarist Paul Kossoff. Kossoff jammed with Rodgers and Brown Sugar at the Pickle Picken, a pub in London's Finsbury Park.

Kossoff was so impressed that he and Rodgers decided to create a new entity. Joined by drummer

Simon Kirke, Kossoff's partner in Black Cat Bones, and bassist Andy Fraser, fresh from John Mayall's Bluesbreakers, this new group was named Free by noted British blues pioneer Alexis Korner.

Beginning in 1968's "Tons of Sobs" and extending through 1973's "Heartbreaker," Free joined Cream and Led Zeppelin as leaders of the British blues revival. Free's winning combination of blues, ballads and rock won them wide praise and an international following. That popularity continues today, as "All Right Now," the group's signature song, was recently recognized by ASCAP for garnering more than one million radio plays in the United States alone.

When Free disbanded in 1973, Rodgers formed Bad Company with Mott the Hoople guitarist Mick Ralphs. Together they auditioned players and settled on former King Crimson bassist Boz Burrell and drummer Simon Kirke. Paul approached Led Zeppelin manager Peter Grant who signed the group to Zeppelin's newly-formed Swan Song Records and Rodgers came up with the name Bad Company.

His idea was met with resistance from the band, management and the record company. Rodgers stuck to his guns and so Bad Company it was.

"Bad Company," their 1974 debut album, enjoyed international success. "Bad Company took off like a rocket in the U.S.," remembers Rodgers. "When we started our first U.S. tour, the album was 99 in the charts. By the time we worked our way across America, it hit RIDES FOR EVERYONE. There will be lots of traditional favorites at this year's Jubilee Festival with a complete and modern Kiddieland, with plenty of family-friendly rides, sure to please all children and parents.

Amusements of America offers unlimited ride night

Kiddieland, with plenty of family-friendly rides, sure to please all children and parents.

Carnival games appealing to all ages and skill levels will line the midway, offering beautiful plush prizes galore.

A wide variety of fun foods like candy apples, sno-cones, cotton candy and long-time fair staples like corn dogs, funnel cakes and sausage sandwiches will be in plentiful supply.

Amusements of America is a 60-year old family owned and operated company. The company was founded with the purchase of the ferris wheel from the just completed 1939 New York World's Fair, by Anthony Vivona. His oldest sons, Morris and John, soon became involved in the operation and their three younger brothers, Dominic, Phil, and Babe joined them shortly thereafter.

Today, 60 years later, the business is still operated by the Vivona family with several of their sons and nephews now taking an active leadership role in the family operation.

This family-style of management has proven successful for the Vivonas. This is most evident by virtue of their regular and long standing performance at dozens of major state and country fairs.

With three separate and complete units touring the country at all times, the carnival travels more than 20,000 miles annually, playing for more than eight million people.

Expanding upon the success of last year's Thursday night opening review, Amusements of America will offer a special wristband night on Thursday, May 18. This Unlimited Ride Night will give Jubilee visitors a great chance to sample the 35 midway rides Amusements of America offers.

Arrive early on Saturday, as wristbands will be sold from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. for $15. After 3 p.m. tickets will be regular price. However, those with the wristband can continue to ride until closing at 11 p.m.

Also, Sunday will feature the wristbands for $15, which will allow you to ride unlimited times all afternoon. So plan to come early and take advantage of this special offer.

Amusements of America, the world's largest traveling amusement park will be at the Chesapeake Jubilee Thursday, May 18 through Sunday, May 21. Single tickets are sold for 75 cents, packages of 15 for $10 and 40 ticket packages for $25. Unlimited ride tickets are sold Thursday night, Saturday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. and Sunday for $15.

Child Identification program

Two child safety programs will be offered at Chesapeake Jubilee 2000 — "Operation Child Identification," a permanent I.D. record and a Lost and Found Safety Area.

A project sponsored by the Chesapeake Police and provided by the Chesapeake Police Explorer Post, will provide fingerprinting and a booklet or card to be kept by parents as a permanent record.

This project is a security measure in the event that a child is lost at any time, not just during Jubilee. Parents keep the I.D. information at home to serve as a ready reference for police officers should a child be missing.

For children's safety while at Jubilee, parents are encouraged to tell their children if they get separated from them, to find the nearest police officer or Jubilee official. They will escort the child to the Lost and Found Tent where any children or articles that are lost during the three days of the Jubilee can be located.

Dolores, Jeannie and Bruce Hobbs

Team of professionals committed to excellence at Hobbs Studios

Hobbs Studio has been a leader in photographic excellence in the Tidewater area since its establishment in 1985.

The Hobbs family has been fulfilling the photographic needs of Tidewater families since his Navy days as a chief photographer's mate. As co-owner and founder of Hobbs Studio, he has assembled a team of professionals committed to excellence.

Bruce Hobbs is the past governor of the Virginia Professional Photographers Association (VPPA) for the Tidewater District. He was recently selected to be the incoming secretary for the VPPA Board of Directors. Jeannie, his daughter, is currently the secretary for the Tidewater District of the VPPA.

Bruce and Jeannie both have earned their certified professional photographers degree for the Professional Photographers of America. They are the only certified professional photographer father and daughter team in the 100 year history of the VPPA.

During the annual convention of the VPPA, Bruce received a special recognition award from his peers. This award was for the years of encouragement, guidance and advice he has freely given to the members of the profession.

Hobbs Studio is located at 857 S. Battlefield Blvd. in Great Bridge, where they specialize in creating family and children's portraits along with beautiful wedding memories.

Jeannie has become the photographer of choice among this area's high school seniors. Every year for the past five years Jeannie has traveled all over the east coast gathering ideas for the senior photography season.

"This is going to be the best year ever for high school seniors because of the new sets and backgrounds that will soon be available," said Jeannie. She is constantly working to add more versatility and personality to her senior's portraits.

Dolores Hobbs, co-owner of Hobbs Studios, serves as the office manager, bookkeeper and professional critic. Together they have built a strong reputation for beautiful portraiture in their community.

You can find examples of their work all over the area. One display in Greenbrier Mall near the Piccadilly Cafeteria is especially popular with mall patrons.

Other fine works of Hobbs Studio may be viewed at the Chesapeake City Hall lobby, the City Deli restaurant, Connie's Kids and many other Chesapeake businesses.

Eddie's Bus Service will provide transportation

Eddie's Bus Service will provide transportation to the Chesapeake Jubilee on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, May 19-21, from two Park-And-Ride locations.

The fare is $2 per person round trip from all Park-And-Ride locations. Park-And-Ride locations are Great Bridge Civic Center at Albemarle Drive and Shea Drive or Indian River High School at 1969 Braves Trail off Dunbarton Drive.

Handicapped parking will be available at both locations and lift-equipped bus service will be available for persons with disabilities.

Shuttle services will be available during the following hours:

■ From Park-And-Ride locations Friday, 5 - 8 p.m., Saturday, 9:30 a.m. - 4 p.m., and Sunday, 11:30 a.m. - 4:30 p.m.

Zambelli fireworks light up sky at Chesapeake Jubilee event

Zambelli Internationale, "The First Family of Fireworks" will paint the night skies over Chesapeake May 19-20.

The display will incorporate and unfold a wondrous combination of synchronized pyrotechnic effects choreographed to a musical soundtrack. These effects will be discharged with a computer generated firing script and will be launched from the Chesapeake Jubilee site.

Zambelli Internationale is basically a painter who has every color and spectrum effect in the world. The Chesapeake Jubilee has chosen a "Contemporary Soundtrack," and fireworks display will evolve around that theme.

When the music Crescendos, gets louder or more powerful, they will fire a shell that has great depth and impact. When the music gets slower or softer, a more delicate and smaller presentation will appear. The music and the fireworks will go hand in hand.

To help you visualize this the Zambelli Internationale Choreographers will paint the type of fireworks burst with a high or low elevation depending on the rhythm of the music.

The score was listening to and planned out with the aid of a computer. Within the computer, a maintenance file stored a time for a discharge and display duration. The computer automatically backtimes all the shells selected and lets the choreographers know exactly how long the show will be and the illumination duration for each shell for the prime presentation.

Once the computer backtimed all the shells selected for the "Chesapeake Extravaganza", the computer printed out a schedule of the shells chosen so they could be picked, packaged and labeled for delivery. Even though fireworks displays are computerized, they are still primitive art. Each shell is made by a master pyrotechnician.

When the Chesapeake Jubilee Committee selected Zambelli Internationale fireworks to host these presentations, they did so because of Zambelli's true artistry and dedication to the advancement of technology in the fireworks industry.

Zambelli Internationale Fireworks of New Castle, Penn., has presented an average of 3,000 displays every year across the United States and around the globe, making it the largest fireworks manufacturer in the world.

Zambelli Internationale Fireworks creates memorable pyrotechnic events for everyone from president and heads of state to newlyweds and amazing theatrical productions including the "Livin' La Vida Loca" tour.

Equestrian talent featured

This year's Horse Expo, as part of the Chesapeake Jubilee, will be held on May 20. Tidewater's best local equestrian talent will be featured. The expo will showcase an exciting array of horse breeds and disciplines, Arabians, draft horses, miniatures, mules, quarter horses and warm bloods.

Spectators are encouraged to visit with exhibitors following the presentations.

The Horse Expo will run from 1 to 4 p.m. on Saturday. Admission is free.

talent contests where you could win money — and I needed money," Messina recalls fondly. "So, I won the grand prize and part of the deal was getting to sing on this live radio show broadcast from Kentucky.

"I went up there and did pretty well, so they made me a regular. I was singing on the show one night, when they told me I had a phone call. This guy says he's a producer and he wants to get together. It's Dec. 19 and I'm going home the next day, because I'd missed Christmas with my family the year before and it about killed me, so I really wasn't in the mood for the runaround again.

"I was thinking, 'Oh great, now I gotta go meet with this guy!' He starts in with 'You got a little Dolly in your voice, and a little Reba.' He's running down all his plans: make a demo, shop it to a couple labels, maybe do a showcase. Finally, I said, 'Hey! That's great...but I don't have any money.' Fearing that would be the end of it, because it's always about that.

"He looked at me like I was nuts!" He said, "I don't want your money, and we went down in the basement of this publishing company he was with and actually put some stuff on tape."

That producer was Byron Gallimore, who was also developing a young maverick named Tim McGraw.

initial recording de-railed during a management shift at the label.

"Just about every label in Nashville has offered us a great deal," Messina recounts, "but by the time my deal fell apart, they'd all signed women and the slot was full."

While Messina struggled to recover her equilibrium, McGraw's star took off.

At the height of his initial explosion, Messina went to Fan Fair as her dear friend's guest — and met Curb A&R executive Phil Gemhard backstage.

"I was thinking 'I'll need a redhead on your label,' she announced cheekily.

The folks at Curb agreed. Before long, Messina was in the studio with Gallimore and McGraw co-producing her debut album. It came out of the chute hotter than Georgia asphalt and a star was seemingly born.

Knowing who you are, what you want, what's important can ground a person in the stormiest waters. For Jo Dee Messina, it allowed her to wait until she found the songs she believed in — and offered the confidence to stay true to her heart.

"I think these songs are very basic," Messina says with a knowing smile. "I look for the simplest songs in a lot of ways, because it's the simplest things that people relate to. And music is, ultimately, about connecting."

Recording artist Rodgers rocks fans with enthusiasm number one."

One of the most popular of all rock bands, Rodgers' six multi-platinum albums with Bad Company have spawned such enduring radio classics as "Rock 'n Roll Fantasy," "Shooting Star," "Run With The Pack" and "Rock Steady," all written by Paul Rodgers.

A note of interest, on "Rock 'n Roll Fantasy" Paul played all of the guitar parts. The group's popular greatest hits compilation "10 From 6" remains an essential primer for fans throughout the world.

Since leaving Bad Company, Rodgers has maintained a high profile.

Following "Cut Loose" his 1983 solo effort, Rodgers formed The Firm, a popular partnership with former Led Zeppelin guitarist Jimmy Page. Rodgers and Page had first collaborated on the Bill Wyman organized "Willie And The Poor Boys" album. That successful union led to their joint billing on the U.S. leg of the historic ARMS tour.

At the tour's conclusion, the two formed The Firm with bassist Tony Franklin and former AC/DC drummer Chris Slade. Fueled by the popularity of such singles as "Radioactive," "Satisfaction Guaranteed" and "All The King's Horses," "The Firm" and "Mean Business," the group's two albums, enjoyed international success. Most fans know that Paul wrote "Radioactive," not many know that he played the guitar solo.

In 1995, Rodgers assembled a band consisting of guitarist Geoff Whitehorn (Paul McCartney, Roger Daltrey). On bass was Jaz Lochrie (Go West), on drums was Jim Copley (Jeff Beck, Seal).

Rodgers worked the new band live for 18 months before recording his 1997 CD "Now." In that time the band performed to ecstatic acclaim in 20 territories ranging from the USA, Canada, Russia, South America, throughout Europe to Japan and more unusual territories such as Romania, Bulgaria, Israel and Greece.

From the spring of 1998 to the present, Rodgers continues to tour with a sizzling band that creates a buzz wherever they play. With Howard Leese on guitar, from Heart, drummer Jeff Kathan and bassist Jason Boyleston, Paul notes, "Fans are embracing this band like never before." Paul Rodgers.

Despite having written and recorded some of rock's most compelling and durable songs, Rodgers' enthusiasm and amazing talent endures.

Hungry Anyone?

More than 35 vendors will be cooking up specialties to tempt the taste buds of jubilee-goers. For real meals there will be delicious steak, marinated chicken sandwiches, steamed crabs, gyros, roasted corn and more. Side dishes include fries — regular, curly or sweet potato, onion rings and hot dogs. Cinnamon rolls, ice cream and funnel cakes are available for dessert.

Carnival games, rides for all ages will line Jubilee midway

The Chesapeake Jubilee is set once again to entertain and thrill thousands of attendees during this year's 2000 Chesapeake Jubilee. In keeping with their commitment to quality and variety, the presenters are pleased to offer the public an amusement company recognized throughout its industry as one of the nation's premier carnival operators, Amusements of America.

They will be presenting their spectacular midway as the main amusement attraction at this year's Chesapeake Jubilee.

Millions of dollars worth of new rides will be in action at the Jubilee, according to Amusements of America officials. For the first time, visitors to this year's Jubilee will get a good look at the Fireball, a super spectacular thrill ride with maximum visual and physical appeal.

The Fireball passenger compartment resembles a huge, clawed hand, with the riders seated at the tips of the fingers. The 'hand,' mounted at the end of a 60-foot long arm on a tripod base, contorts into all sorts of unusual and improbable positions as it swings along with the arm in a pendulum motion.

Riders are turned upside down and around, all the while experiencing the full effects of a powerful G-force, as the arm swings back and forth. For after-dark riders of the Fireball there is stupendous, flashing colored light show accompanying the experience.

As always, the Chesapeake Jubilee midway will offer a wide variety of rides, with more of the newest and most popular adult rides, including the 100-foot tall giant ferris wheel, the ever popular European made Wave Swinger, and the ultra-thrilling, dive bombing Kamikaze.

In addition, there will be lots of other traditional ride favorites, as well as a complete and modern

MEMORIAL DAY 2000

Our fallen heroes

They said goodbye to their mothers and fathers, sisters and brothers, and went off to war.

They hugged their children tight and kissed their spouses or sweethearts one last time with a sense of the great longing that was to come.

They left their towns, cities and farms where they had been born and raised. They left schools and jobs, hopes and dreams, careers and callings. And said they would return.

Everyone hoped and prayed for that day. But it never came for many.

The remains of those servicemen and women were laid beneath the green grass of a thousand cities and towns around the world.

The oceans have swallowed the crews of a vast armada. The fate of an untold number is known only to God.

Each Memorial Day we honor the memory of those men and women who went to war, never to return.

This nation owes its very existence to those who answered the call to duty.

Thomas Jefferson once said, "The ground of liberty must be gained by inches." Indeed, by inches and the lives of those who fought for liberty.

This is a war-torn nation. More than 60,000 patriots died in battle during the Revolutionary War. The Civil War claimed another 500,000 Union and Confederate lives. In World War I, 116,000 lost their lives in service to America. World War II saw another 400,000 U.S. citizens perish.

Then came Korea, Vietnam and the Persian Gulf.

In all, more than 1 million Americans have died in war since this country was founded. Who will remember those who gave the last full measure of devotion to the cause of freedom, justice and democracy, if not those who live under the protection of these principles?

All Americans must remember for what these men and women fought. We must cherish their memory and honor their ultimate sacrifice.

Memorial Day ceremonies are just the beginning.

As Gen. Douglas MacArthur, who now lies in peace in Norfolk, said, "The soldier, above all other people, prays for peace, for he must suffer and bear the deepest wounds of war."

Thus, America's veterans and its fallen servicemen and women bequeath this heritage for their children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren — a free and just country unlike any other in the world, past or present.

On Memorial Day, let us honor these fallen men and women who gave selflessly of all they had. They died for their country, for their friends and families, for everyone.

Let us thank God for America.

Let us thank God for those patriots who went off to war. And let us never forget those who did not return.

Bush's Social Security Plan is no reform

The latest plan by presidential candidate George W. Bush to reform Social Security is anything but a reform. It is, instead, a dramatic change in the underlying philosophy and the function of the Social Security System itself.

The Bush plan proposes to keep four and one-half percent of the employee's contribution and the entire employer's share flowing into the Social Security Trust Fund. He emphasizes that only two percent of the employee contribution would be allocated to a personal account for investing in the market to purchase low risk stocks and bonds.

Bush's reason for proposing such a dramatic change in the funding of Social Security is to enable younger generations to amass more wealth to tide them over during retirement, or to leave to their descendants when they die. More wealth for younger Americans is a worthy goal to be sure, although our younger workers certainly need that additional income a lot more in their early years than in old age. That's when they are struggling to establish credit, buy their first home, start a family, and pay off the huge educational loans many Americans have chosen to put on their backs before they fully enter the work force.

Likewise, providing additional security for retirement is an equally desirable social goal, not just for the younger generation, but for all Americans. But, the Bush plan begs a fundamental question. How can he call his plan a "reform" of Social Security if he is unable to guarantee that the Trust Fund will provide its required level of benefits to future recipients in the first place?

Social Security is a guaranteed income program for all those who reach retirement age for life. It is also a guaranteed life-time income for any one who is or becomes disabled, and a survivor benefit for widows and dependent children of a deceased bread winner.

It is not a retirement or pension plan whose benefits are calculated solely on the length of service, contributions made, or the growth (lack thereof) of its investments. The difference lies primarily in its guarantee of benefits, no matter what outside factors intervene, market-generated or otherwise.

The purpose of Social Security is to insure that all those incapable of supporting themselves due to age, death of their provider or disability will not fall into poverty. That is its entire purpose. Social Security was not instituted so that the national government would take the place of the private sector as the pensioner of the American people.

In short, Social Security is a national insurance program designed to protect every citizen, especially against the vicissitudes of old age. And, Social Security, like aging, is universal. That is, its guarantee is to every citizen, regardless of personal income, economic opportunity or inherited wealth.

So, for Social Security to fulfill its sole purpose, there must always be sufficient revenues in its Trust Fund to meet the basic needs of all elderly, disabled and those families suddenly made vulnerable by the death of their provider.

As a nation, we demand much of ourselves. We expect every able-bodied man and woman to contribute their fair share and to pull their own weight. That means working hard from age 18 to 65 to maintain our nation's productivity and managing our lives in such a way as to adequately provide for ourselves and those dependent upon us.

We expect every citizen not only to voluntarily obey the laws and pay their taxes, but to responsibly share the duties of self-government and national defense. But, in return, we the people promise that in exchange for those years of willing service to the well-being of our economy and nation, every citizen may face old age or disability without fear or want and impoverishment.

So before Governor Bush (or anybody else for that matter) can propose a dramatic change in the funding mechanism of Social Security, he must first guarantee that his plan will generate the same level of benefits for every recipient (after being adjusted for inflation) that exists today. Bush can brag all he wants about the fact he is only talking about two percent, but he has not told us where or how he intends to make up that two percent in the Trust Fund so that the

Just let Elian go home now

It is past time for Elian Gonzalez to go home. That home is with his father in Cuba.

The 6-year-old boy was found clinging to an inner tube off the coast of Florida on Thanksgiving Day. His mother and stepfather did not survive the boat capsizing as they attempted to escape from Cuba. Elian had been staying with relatives in Miami as the bitter custody battle between the relatives and his father was litigated. His father was given custody, but remains in American during the appeal of that ruling.

The Real World

By B.J. Sessions, senior columnist.

Then the relatives in Miami filed a petition to allow Elian to ask for asylum in the United States. The decision for the court is whether or not Elian has the legal capacity to file for that on his own. To date his relatives have filed on his behalf for asylum and his father, who is now with him, has countered that only he could file on behalf of the child.

There is no federal law governing the age to ask for asylum, but there is a prior court case where a 12-year-old Russian boy filed for asylum and won. The courts must decide if Elian, at 6, can stand on his own. Both the relatives in Miami and the father will provide Elian a good home. But the issue boils down to who should have the ultimate right and responsibility for a child when one of the blood parents is competent and capable.

In this case, it is and should be the father. The three-judge panel of the 11th Circuit Court which is handling the Elian Gonzalez case has predicted that lawyers won't have to wait long before they rule on the Cuban boy's appeal.

One of the judges asked the attorney for Elian's father why Juan Miguel Gonzalez took five months to come to the United States to claim his son. Lawyer Gregory Craft responded that the father's efforts to travel from Cuba to the United States were slowed by bureaucracies of both countries.

Within days of Elian's arrival policies intruded in what should have been a family affair. Regardless of how long it took the father to come to the U.S., the court should award the boy to the father, allow them to go home and establish visitation with the relatives in Miami.

The fact that our country does not have normal relations with Cuba should be re-examined, and transportation between the countries should be open.

Elian Gonzalez has cost the taxpayers of this country millions of dollars and it should be stopped now. Let him go.

Welcome to the real world.

California vs. Va.: Choice is clear

Perhaps I should have been born in California.

I'm a native Virginian, born and bred, and for that I am infinitely proud.

We are after all, "the mother of states and statesmen" and this country's bed of heritage. I've always loved Virginia's weather, too, with its four distinct seasons. That is, until the last few years.

I have always adored bundling up in the winter, the touch-and-go spring, the sultry summers and the windy falls. Lately, however, I've decided that a constant spring or fall would be the ideal.

Hence, California — land of year-round 70 degrees — beckons.

I came to this conclusion one day while riding through Pungo in my car. The windows were down, the radio was on and the scenery was simply wonderful. And it was about 70 degrees.

What else could someone ask for? When it's 70, you don't have to run the air conditioner. You can sleep with the windows open. You can have an outdoor barbecue and not worry about the bugs or sweating heat. Your grass won't wither and turn brown in the heat. Fleas don't seem to appear on your pet as when it's 90 degrees.

In short, 70 degrees is perfect.

I mentioned my infatuation with the moderate temperatures and weather in California to my husband. He was quick to point out that the land of movie stars isn't that wonderful.

For starters, he said, would I like to move to a place where you're under constant threat of earthquake? Where you could lose everything you own when the ground starts rumbling?

Or would I like to live in a place that's constantly plagued by wildfires that could burn right through the house?

Or would I like to live in a place where everyone weighs approximately 100 pounds and I don't? Would I, the goddess of pale skin, like to live in a place where the ultimate tan is essential? Where beach bunnies proliferate?

Would I like to live in a place that's known for its...well...quirky people? Would I like to live in a place where the cost of living is significantly higher?

I thought about it a while and said, "I guess not."

Though we don't have the perfect weather here, we do have plenty to be thankful for.

After all, this is a pretty area with its wonderful combination of mountains and ocean just hours from each other. We have history — lots of it — making for a wonderfully intriguing past.

In our immediate area, we have great seafood from the ocean and Chesapeake Bay and rivers, all that crabs and fish and oysters.

In Hampton Roads, we have a wonderful combination of country and city. You can be in the ultimate hubbub of traffic one minute, and half an hour later enjoy the serenity of the country in Pungo or Hickory.

We have the military, which makes for an interesting culture. And we have culture, period, from the opera to the symphony.

We have lots of great festivals, museums, attractions and shopping opportunities.

In short, we have it pretty good here.

So we don't have 70-degree days year-round. But we do have a good mix of snow and heat. We can get a hurricane in the fall, a snowstorm in winter, torrential downpours in spring and heat and humidity hot enough to curl your toes in the summer.

And, luckily, in between all that, we do have those perfect 70-degree days.

Ok, so I will never be a Californian. I will never tot around town in a convertible with the top down, bleached blonde hair streaming in the wind.

And I'll hopefully never survive an earthquake.

Virginia is a pretty good place to be after all.

Fishing for fun: Here's what's biting

Continuing on with our fishing article from last week, Virginia Beach has four fishing piers:

■ Little Island Fishing Pier - Sandbridge - April through October.

more. This is one of the country's most unusual piers and extends 600 feet into the middle of Chesapeake Bay. Legendary numbers of striped bass (locally known as rockfish) show around the crossings four artificial islands each October to well into December.

■ Lynnhaven Fishing Pier - 2350 Starfish Road off Shore Drive - Resort strip side of the Lynnhaven Inlet Bridge on Shore Drive. Look for spot and croaker early in season, also flounder, speckled trout and puppy drum fish.

■ Virginia Beach Fishing Pier - 15th Street and Oceanfront. Only pier along the resort strip and extends 700 feet into the ocean. Access to drum, channel bass and even bluefish. Open from April through October.

There's another kind of fishing in Virginia Beach that I would like to mention — pond fishing made possible by fish farmers. Yes, you read me right, fish farmers.

It seems in 1992 three different farmers built ponds and installed aerators in the center of the ponds to keep the water oxygenated. They stocked them with tiny, fingerling fish not more than two inches long that grows into a hybrid striped bass (4,000 to 5,000 fingerlings to an acre pond). These fingerlings are fed commercial feed purchased from the same dealer who furnishes them chicken and other animal feed. The farmers toss this feed on the surface of the ponds twice a day.

The waters of the ponds are tested regularly, making sure there is enough oxygen to keep a large population of fish alive. Instead of the typical worries regular farmers might have, these farmers have to contend with battling great blue herons, osprey and even river otters — all liking to feed on the tasty striped bass.

Customers of many local restaurants who serve the striped bass and channel catfish also enjoy the fish raised by these fish farmers. Since hybrid fish aren't capable of breeding on their own, the ponds must be restocked, making sure no grown striped bass is left behind as he would devour the new crop of fingerling fish.

This practice called "aquaculture" is a profitable alternative to traditional farming. Most fishing ponds do not charge admission, nor do you need a license to fish. You pay for your catch by the pound.

Whether casting from shore, pier or boat, anyone liking to fish will find a fishing place in Virginia Beach. From the rivers, to the Chesapeake Bay, into the Atlantic Ocean, whether for sport or food, fishing is an exciting, rewarding and entertaining experience. If you haven't fished, try it. You might like it. It's calming to the soul and I hear the challenge and thrill of hooking and bringing in a "big one" is beyond compare.

No fishing license is required to fish in salt water from Cape Henry south to the North Carolina line which includes Rudee Inlet, on head boats or charter boats or fishing piers unless you are fishing for a citation fish then a license will be required. Neither do you need a license when fishing from your own property.

A license is required for all anglers age 16 and older to fish in the Chesapeake Bay. A license is also needed for resident anglers 16 and older for all freshwater fishing. Licenses are valid for the calendar year Jan. 1 through Dec. 31 and cost $12.50 for fresh water, $7.50 for salt water.

Nonresidents can purchase a five-day license for $6 fresh water and $5.50 salt water.

Happy fishing!

City launches online real estate services

Beginning in early July, Virginia Beach real estate assessments and property information will be available on the city's website, www.VBgov.com/RealEstate.

Virginia Beach citizens and other customers then will have free access to real estate assessment data anytime. Web access will greatly improve service to those who need need ownership verification and assessments for mortgage loans or credit applications. Web access will also make it easier for property owners to verify that their assessment records are accurate and equitable compared to surrounding properties.

Property ownership and assessment data are matters of public record under the Freedom of Information Act and must be made available upon request. However, property owners who do not wish to be identified with their property record on the Internet may request that their names not be included. Request forms are available by calling or visiting the Office of the Real Estate Assessor in Building 18 at the Municipal Center or may be printed from the real estate assessor's website. Signed forms must be submitted in person or by mail. Electronic submissions will not be accepted.

federal government does not break its covenant with its people.

Whether there is other wealth generated for individuals is beside the point. The U.S. government has promised that the Social Security Trust Fund will always be solvent enough to meet its obligations to every citizen, no matter what outside forces are in place, for a minimum of 70 years into the future.

Any plan that allows the federal government to force individual citizens to save and then dictates where those savings may be invested sounds awfully "Big Brother" to me. If the Trust Fund doesn't need that two percent, then lower the outrageous 6.5 percent we put on our younger workers and let them decide where to spend or invest that money.

But, of course, that is a joke! The Trust Fund needs every penny it is currently receiving to prepare for the onslaught of the baby boomer retirement crunch due to hit between 2015 through 2040. Currently, the Social Security Administration advises that the Trust Fund is solvent through 2037, so we are not exactly on the brink of a bankrupt Trust Fund, to say the least.

Not that our Social Security system doesn't need serious reform. But any real reform must include restoring generational fairness in how the FICA tax is assessed. It is outrageous that our youngest workers are expected to cough up 6.5 percent of their meager salaries at the very time when they are at the lowest income level they will know in their lifetime; nevertheless, that they desperately need that very income to establish themselves as economically self-sufficient. Those baby boomers, by the way, only paid three percent of their income to the payroll tax when we were in their children's shoes.

So, why isn't FICA assessed on a sliding-upward percentage scale based on age? Those furthest from reaping the benefits ought to be taxed at a much lower rate than those on the brink of retirement. After all, Social Security is a universal program and what is more universal than aging — everybody does it at exactly the same rate and time.

You can generate the same total revenues (without even raising the rate cap on income subject to FICA) simply by gradually increasing the rate by age groups; i.e. by collecting 16 percent for the youngest workers (16 to 25) up to a highest rate of eight percent on the oldest work group (55 to 65).

In fact, you would even increase revenues to the Trust Fund at the very time it is needed most. Baby boomers are the population group that make up that oldest employee group, and

Bonnie White: Honorary Witch of Pungo

By Victoria Hecht Editor

The Honorary Witch of Pungo isn't likely to hop onto a broom anytime soon, but you may see her driving a tractor or a 10-wheeler.

Bonnie E. White, this year's honorary witch for the Pungo Strawberry Festival, has deep roots to the area. She grew up in Back Bay and graduated from the Creeds School in 1952.

That same year she married Robert W. White Sr., a local boy whom she met "at some point or another" when she was 15.

"I never dated anyone else — and we've been together ever since," she smiled.

White says it was as close to "love at first sight" as possible. In July 1953, the Whites welcomed their first child, Robert Jr., and four years later, daughter Kathy came along.

Farming is in the family's blood. White is the daughter of a farmer, though, she laughed, "only we basically had one horse and a plow."

Her husband and son's farm on Princess Anne Lane has been in the family for generations. It is one of the largest grain-producing farms in the area. The Whites even earned Virginia Beach's 1999 Family of the Year in Agriculture.

"White is simply 'bewitched' by the southern end of Virginia Beach, which is her home."

"It's as close to heaven as you can get without being there," she said. "And I love the ocean and the farmland."

White also loves the Pungo Strawberry Festival, established in 1983. She'll generally attend locals' night on Friday, and spend all day Saturday and part of Sunday at the festivities.

I just enjoy all the people," she said. Festival weekend is the one time of year when this small hamlet is thronged with thousands of people looking for a good time. White particularly enjoys it because it's an alcohol-free event and "such a lovely family affair."

Being named honorary witch came as a real shock to White.

"I was very surprised, because I haven't done as much in the community as the other witches," she said modestly.

But she plans to play it to the hilt. As the festival's goodwill ambassador, White will circulate around the gala in a Colonial costume she designed, in fabric complete with strawberries and little bears. She's also going to carry a broom and may design a special magic wand. And she has even printed up her own calling cards emblazoned with her name and "I'll get you, my pretty!", a quote from "The Wizard of Oz."

"I hope to be a good witch — unless someone zaps a spell on me," she noted.

White plans to brew a spell or two or her own — for good weather! Nothing can dampen festival spirits quicker than rain, so she's working on a sunny, pleasant weekend.

If White is a witch, does that mean husband Robert is a warlock? She grinned. "I don't know, but I can certainly cast a spell and try to make him one."

This year's honorary witch is active at Charity United Methodist Church, where she has served as a Sunday school teacher, financial secretary and board member. She is a tireless volunteer for the Red Cross and enjoys bowling, canasta and bridge.

Name: Bonnie E. White.

What brought you to this area: Born here and have always lived here.

Hometown: Virginia Beach.

Age: Been 39 long enough! Guess I will confess 66.

Nickname: Honey Bunny. Given to me by my husband when we met. He said I was his honey and bunny sounded like Bonnie.

Occupation: Housewife, mother and grandmother.

Marital Status: Been married to Robert W. White Sr., a farmer, for 47 years.

Worst habit: I do not have enough patience. Wish I had lots more.

Pets: None at present. Have had many in the past.

Hobbies: Collecting all kinds of bunnies, bowling, bridge group and canasta.

Ideal vacation: Anywhere there is an ocean where I can take a book, sit in the sun and read and watch the beach.

Pet peeves: People who abuse children or anyone. People who are always late.

First job: Roses 5 and 10.

Least liked job: Have not had one. Worked at Roses for six months, then got married and loved it. No other outside job.

Favorite sports team: Atlanta Braves.

Favorite musicians: Elvis Presley, Eddy Arnold and George Strait. They are the good old country boys.

Most embarrassing moment: When I was younger — lots younger — the top of my two-piece bathing suit fell down around my waist while I was in the ocean at Sandbridge. No other explanations needed!

How I would like to be remembered: As doing the best that I could in everything that I tried to do. I may not always succeed, but I try.

If I received $1 million: I would see that my children and grandchildren were provided for and donate to cancer and diabetes research.

If I had 10 minutes on national television: I would try to get the people and the government at all levels to improve the care of the elderly in nursing homes. In some of the homes they are not given the best of care due to a shortage of workers and helpers.

Children: Robert W. White Jr., 46, works on the farm with his dad. Has worked on the farm since he was 12 years old. He now runs the operation since his father retired due to complications from diabetes. They won the Family of the Year in Agriculture Award in 1999. Robert is active in the community and church work. He is married to Kim White and they have three girls — Kylie, Kaitlin and Kolby.

Kathryn L. White, 42, works for Bank of America. Kathy has worked for the bank for 24 years. She started when she was 18 when I was known as Virginia National Bank at Virginia Beach and has been with them ever since. She has seen the bank through many changes and is an asset. Kathy is also a member of the Sandbridge Volunteer Rescue Squad and is an EMT. She is engaged to D.A. Martin of Chesapeake. They are planning an October wedding.

Favorite movies: "Gone With The Wind," "Ben Hur" and "Pretty Woman."

Magazines I read regularly: McCall's and People.

Favorite authors: Danielle Steele and Diana Palmer — as Grandma used to say, "Those trashy novels."

Favorite night out on the town: Go out to eat with my children, grandchildren and husband.

Favorite restaurants: The Black Angus and Steinhilber's.

Favorite meal: Steak, shrimp, baked potato and green beans.

What most people don't know about me: That I can drive a tractor and a 10-wheeler truck — but only if I have to now.

Best thing about myself: I try to have a positive outlook on things, both good and bad, and then turn it over to God.

45th annual Boardwalk Art Show coming up June 15-18

Hundreds of world-class sculptors, painters, photographers and craftsmen will converge on the Virginia Beach oceanfront for the 45th annual Boardwalk Art Show, a four-day extravaganza recognized as one of the oldest and top 20 outdoor art shows in the country. The event will take place June 15-18 and is organized by the Contemporary Art Center of Virginia.

More than 300 artists competing for $24,000 in prizes will display their work along a 14-block stretch of the newly reconstructed boardwalk in Virginia Beach. Widened to 28 feet and elegantly landscaped, the boardwalk will provide an even more dramatic setting for the Boardwalk Art Show. The show hours are Thursday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Friday, Saturday and Sunday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. This event is free to the public.

Also, this year's show coincides with OpSail 2000 Hampton Roads, billed as the largest tall ship and maritime event in history. OpSail 2000 Hampton Roads is expected to draw as many as 20 Class A Tall Ships and hundreds of Class B and C ships, as well as the encouragement of hundreds of privately owned vessels that will travel along with them. The million people expected to converge on this area will delight in the opportunity to enjoy a nationally recognized outdoor art show and festival during the weekend.

The Boardwalk Art Show judges are Ann Roth, curator, Gallery of Art and Design, North Carolina State University, Raleigh, N.C.; Maurine Littleton, Maurine Littleton Gallery, Washington, D.C.; Sidney Lawrence, Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden, Washington, D.C. Awards decisions will be made on June 16. The artist's party and awards ceremony will be held at 7:30 p.m. on Friday night, June 16, at the Contemporary Art Center of Virginia, 2200 Parks Avenue.

The major sponsors for the Boardwalk Art Show include the city of Virginia Beach, Cox Communications, WNIS, WTAR, The Coast, 96X, WHRO and Barker Campbell Farley and Mansfield. All proceeds support the exhibition and educational programming of the Contemporary Art Center of Virginia.

During the Boardwalk Art Show, the oceanfront becomes an endless stage for artists who bring a truly festive atmosphere to the event. The festival's eclectic mix of artists and performers make the show a must-see for locals and visitors alike.

Largest Red Grooms exhibit since '85 brings fun here

The Contemporary Art Center of Virginia presents the works of Red Grooms during a major summer exhibition, "Red Grooms: In Pursuit of Serious Fun," on view June 9 through Sept. 3.

Red Grooms enjoys an international reputation as a humorous commentator on popular culture and modern life. The exhibition at the center will feature what is perhaps his best known recent work, "The Bus," a 22-foot long walk-through environment, recreating in canvas, plastic and wood a New York City bus and its colorful riders.

Grooms is equally at home working on canvas and paper, and the exhibition includes more than 60 paintings, prints and drawings in addition to large-scale sculptures. The exhibition, organized by the Contemporary Art Center of Virginia with the assistance of the Marlborough Gallery New York, is the largest museum show of his work since Grooms' retrospective at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts in 1985. This show focuses on works that explore and comment on his recent travels, aspects of urban life, his continuing fascination with art and art history and contemporary American culture.

Charles Roger Grooms, born in Nashville, Tenn. in 1937, has lived and worked in New York City since 1958. He attended the School of the Art Institute of Chicago, George Peabody Teachers College in Nashville, the New School for Social Research in New York City and the Hans Hoffman School in Provincetown, Mass. (It was Hoffman, one of the leading artists of his generation and a renowned teacher, who first used the nickname "Red"). Since the success of his first one-man show in 1960, Red Grooms has been one of the leading figures in American art. A sculptor, painter, printmaker, performing artist and filmmaker, he is a master of many media, as well as the inventor of several.

Best known, perhaps, for such dazzling three-dimensional environments as The City of Chicago (first exhibited at the Venice Biennale in 1967), Ruckus Manhattan, The Discount Store, Ruckus Rodeo and last year's huge success Red Grooms at Grand Central, he gained fame for his ingenious and good humored depictions of real life as captured in these complex, multi-piece sculptural groupings. These installations are a direct reflection of his wry perception, acute observational powers and bravura technique.

Grooms first achieved prominence along with the so-called "Pop Artists." Often included in that group, he, like they, appropriates much of his attitude, as well as his technique, from the world of popular culture. Unlike them, he went well beyond the limited and limiting world of pop culture and created a kind of parallel universe in three dimensions, his famous "sculptopictoramas," which grew in scale to become the full-blown environments that have secured his place in art history.

The Contemporary Art Center of Virginia is located at 2200 Parks Ave. It is open to the public Tuesday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Saturday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.; and Sunday, noon to 4 p.m. Admission is $3 for adults and $2 for seniors and students. Children under the age of four are admitted free. Call 425-0000 for more information or visit the center's web site at www.cacv.org.

Events related to "Red Grooms: In Pursuit of Serious Fun Events" coming up include:

■ Saturday, June 10, 7:30 p.m., Red Tie Gala. Sure to be the party of the year at the Contemporary Art Center of Virginia. A spectacular evening is planned with dinner, jazz music in the atrium with Laura Martier and band, dancing to the music of Off the Record and a silent auction of works by Red Grooms. Tickets are $150 per person and are available through the center by calling 425-0000, ext. 19.

■ Sunday, June 11, noon to 4 p.m., free public opening. A Family Fest will celebrate the opening of the exhibition. Music, refreshments, caricatures and art activities for children of all ages will fill the day and is free and open to the public.

From 3 to 4 p.m., Rainbow Productions, Inc. will present Mother Goose's Rock-n-Roll Schoolhouse, a riotous good time for the whole family in the spirit of Groom's wacky and exuberant character. Admission is $3 for adults (includes one child).

We served over 30 million last year, but our goal is no repeat business.

Unfortunately, business has been booming this year. And we'd like to put a stop to it. That's why The Salvation Army believes in getting to the heart of a problem and solving it.

We're a different sort of organization in that respect. Just as we use earthmovers and bulldozers to rebuild a disaster-ravaged town, we provide the tools to repair damaged lives. If a child can't read, we teach him. If a young mother can't cope, we counsel her. If a father can't stop drinking or using cocaine, we rehabilitate him. We help people find what they need within themselves to rebuild their world. We give them the means to reclaim their future. So they won't have to come back and see us again.

Please give generously to The Salvation Army and help us reduce our business.

NEED KNOWS NO SEASON

BATTLE OF WILLIAMSBURG. The 3rd Virginia Infantry Regiment, which did a re-enactment at Lynnhaven House last weekend, also participated in a re-enactment of the Battle of Williamsburg at Endview Plantation in Newport News.

House," said Bueche. "Of course, they are very interested in history and in interpreting history correctly," she stressed.

"Every year they do an encampment here to help us raise funds to support the Lynnhaven House. Without support from groups like the 3rd Virginia, we would have a very hard time staying open. They've been very good to us."

First Lt. Jim Waltz and a small contingent of men from the 3rd Virginia offered Lynnhaven House visitors a glimpse of what life was like for soldiers in the Confederate Army during the early years of the Civil War.

Earlier this month the 3rd Virginia participated in a preservation march and a re-enactment at Endview Plantation on the Peninsula. The ten-mile march to Yorktown raised more than $4,500 for historic preservation projects. In July, the 3rd will return to Gettysburg National Historical Park to participate in park service programs. For the locally-based re-enactment unit, Lynnhaven House has been a special place over the years.

"We like to think of Lynnhaven House as 'old home' for us. We normally think of it as a resting weekend," said Waltz.

Within the re-enactment community, the 3rd Virginia has a reputation for being particularly accurate and authentic in its portrayals. Waltz and his comrades have worked diligently to establish and maintain their status.

"We see ourselves as living historians," noted Waltz. "One of the duties of a historian is to educate following generations. That's what we do in reenacting. That's why we do it."

While encampments and demonstrations have created opportunities in which the public can be reached directly, large scale reenactments have provided an additional vehicle to educate the public. Waltz recognized the need for both venues.

Since Waltz was a youngster in Indiana, he has been interested in the Civil War, and he has long regarded living history programs as one of the best methods for portraying history accurately.

"A good living historian or reenactor has to be a frustrated actor," smiled Waltz. "You've got to get up there and want to talk to people. You've got to be outgoing."

Waltz hoped that visitors left Lynnhaven House with a better understanding of the period and of the people who lived it.

"The problem that we have in our society today is that we try to understand the people of past times utilizing the values and views of today. You just can't do that," Waltz maintained.

"The 3rd Virginia was a group of local boys who did what they thought was right. They stood for a cause that they believed in."

Private Mike Kotyk, a new recruit with the 3rd Virginia, was participating in his very first event as a reenactor. Kotyk decided that the best way to learn more about Virginia's role in the Civil War was to become "part of it" as a reenactor. "I hooked up with the 3rd Infantry and got in contact with Jim Waltz. They invited me out to a battle reenactment that they did, and I liked it. That's why I'm here."

Kotyk's interest in the Civil War has a decided psychological bent. "It isn't actually so much the battles, but the psychology that's involved," he said. Fathers fighting on opposite sides from their sons and brothers fighting brothers were concepts that intrigued Kotyk.

"This was a country that only 80 years before had fought together to free themselves from Great Britain," noted Kotyk. "Now they're at each other's throats. I find that interesting," he said.

"Re-enacting puts you in the soldier's place. You are actually there. You are living under the same conditions that they did and eating the same basic types of foods they ate, doing the same recreational activities, living the same lifestyle," Kotyk said.

"I think it really gives you a good impression of what kind of life they lived, the hardships, and even the triumphs that they had to go through."

Dale and Judy Decker, both former re-enactors with the 3rd Virginia who have recently returned to the area, were among the visitors who came out to see the weekend encampment - both still have an intense interest in the Civil War. "It was a scary time," said Dale Decker.

"Either way you looked at it, what was going to happen to the United States was at stake. It was a very violent time," he said. "I particularly admire the courage of the people of the time."

"These people were some very hardy souls to do the things that they did and live under the conditions that they did," said Decker.

"It's fun for me to reenact it and sit back and read about it. I can even go out on the weekend and play the game, but I don't know if I would have the courage or stamina enough if I was living in 1863. These are some of the things that you learn from reenacting. It gives you a whole lot more respect for your ancestors than you might have had before."

Breaking ground for new school

Chesapeake Bay Academy held an official groundbreaking for its new school. Speakers and guests included Mayor Meyera Oberndorf, Vice Mayor Will Sessions, Del. Frank Wagner, Rabbi Michael Panitz, the Rev. Doug Greeting and board members Dennis Deans, Dee Roberts, Greg Scifres and Brad Waitzer. Over the past seven years Heritage United Methodist Church has leased classroom and office space to the school. The new 50,000-square-foot building will be located on Baker Road with space for 200 students.

Seniors get special thanks

By Aune Kirk
Correspondent

Some Very Interesting People (VIPs) were honored on Friday. They're VIPs who give freely of their time, talent and love and ask little in return.

More than 700 of these men attended a luncheon in their honor at the Chesapeake Conference Center. Another 850 more were unable to attend.

The VIPs are volunteers from the Retired and Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP), Senior Companion Program (SCP), Virginia Insurance Counseling Assistance Program (VICAP) and Senior Medicare Patrol. They came from Chesapeake, Norfolk, Virginia Beach, Isle of Wight/Southampton County and Suffolk/Franklin.

It was the first time in 25 years that all four programs were honored in one regional recognition celebration.

According to officials, senior volunteers are a valuable resource who contribute a great deal to any community.

"Volunteers are talented, unique, special, precious and valuable," said Eleanor Bradshaw, from Senior Services of Southeastern Virginia. "Their contribution of human services, loving, caring and sharing is immeasurable."

Dr. Ann McGee, commissioner for the Virginia Department of Aging, agreed.

"The volunteers hold wisdom and experience and we benefit from it," she said.

This year, the volunteers have given 300,000 hours of their time to their communities.

"That 300,000 hours of time is equivalent to 150 full-time employees," she said.

Even though outstanding volunteers weren't individually honored at the luncheon, RSVP coordinators in Virginia Beach and Chesapeake mentioned a few.

According to Bob Jarrell, coordinator in Virginia Beach, Deana Becherer and Erma Hill are "superstars" with him. Whenever he needs volunteers, they are ready and willing to do anything that's asked of them.

"They are head of the mail team and go to all team stations," he said. "They fold and stuff bags for newsletters, correspondence and fundraising. They just finished mailing for the American Heart Association and American Diabetes Association. They take part in all major charities."

The two women also worked the luncheon, registering guests from Virginia Beach and directing them to their tables.

"The satisfaction comes from pleasing people," Hill said. "People are so appreciative."

The two women have worked together for 2 1/2 years and attend the same church. They are also instrumental in recruiting others to their team effort.

Officials say the volunteers' services and contributions are immeasurable.

For example, without the volunteers, family caregivers of about 60 loved ones would not have had eight hours of respite care each week provided by the Senior Companions.

School children would not have had special mentors, tutors, friends and role models on a one-on-one basis to help improve studies, self image and future growth and development.

which is a learning facility that will insure that all young people in Hampton Roads have access to the greatest game in the world," she proclaimed.

"They will also be exposed to the wonderful lessons in life that golf teaches, such as sportsmanship, honesty, integrity, perseverance, respect for tradition, and the rule. They will be better people and better citizens for it. We are very excited that this is going to happen."

PGA Tour Commissioner Tim Finchem was next, and began his speech with praise for Virginia Beach itself.

"The city of Virginia Beach is one of the most enlightened city governments in the country. We have dealt with cities and counties all over the country, and nowhere have we found a better combination of facilities, considering the championship golf course of the TPC, and now this new learning facility. This combination works so well together. The citizens of Virginia Beach should be very proud of the leadership they have in this city."

Finchem explained the reasons for the facility. "The concept of this project is that any kid who watches Tiger Woods or Justin Leonard can have a place to play. They can have comfortable access to this great game. For the city and community, it's much more than teaching kids how to play the game of golf. It's teaching kids life skills and values that will impact their lives together, and we are delighted to be a part of it."

"We know that this program will not only be received well, but it will also make a difference in the lives of these young people. With the skills they learn here, they will be better students, and more skilled for whatever they do," said Mayor Meyera Oberndorf. "We are very excited about this program because it can help take young people and shape their lives so that they will grow into responsible adults. This is the right city, at the right time, and we are going to see to it that it succeeds."

Following the speeches, the three speakers stepped over to a plot on a nearby hill and shoveled several loads of dirt to complete the groundbreaking.

"I think the best thing about this project is the new opportunity for children who wouldn't normally have the chance to get out into the fresh air and learn this game," Oberndorf said after the ceremony. "This game teaches such things as civility, responsibility, and the companionship of others in a very, very positive situation."

THE VIRGINIA BEACH SUN

Shaw said that more residential developments create more worries and farmers find it more difficult to clean their own ditches because of environmental controls.

Councilwoman Barbara Henley, who represents the southern part of the city, suggested that the storm standards should be changed. She said 50- and 100-year storms are a misnomer and that the impact from the wind sides should be considered.

Mark Johnson, storm water engineer who spoke on existing conditions, said that the storm definitions are based on rainfall. He said the staff will go back and look at design to see if the rainfall standards need to be changed and then asked Federal Emergency Management Administration (FEMA) to reevaluate the water shed.

Where the northern part of the city is served generally by city water and sewer, the southern part primarily has open ditches with culverts and private water supplies.

The new capital budget includes $150,000 for the Southern Canal/Lead Ditch Restoration study to analyze approximately 5.75 miles of existing major drainage canal and lead ditch systems in the southern portion of the city. It involves five major systems in the Blackwater and Pungo Boroughs - Milldam Creek, Blackwater Creek, Oakum Creek, Nanney Creek and Beggars Bridge Creek.

Hassen said that in some cases problems have always been there but the gap exists between what new residents expect and the service they receive.

Among the items suggested for further study, Hassen listed placing a note on the final subdivision plans and site plans that states the elevation of the land is low and prone to flooding and to have land owners and home buyers sign a disclaimer statement regarding the elevation of the property and the potential for flooding.

Also suggested for study are determining what is reasonable in terms of requirements for developments of varying size and environmental concerns and continuing current and proposed maintenance programs for existing drainage systems.

Creative Gifts Galore wins top small biz

Hampton Roads locality received Small Business of the Year during an awards luncheon last week at the Sheraton Norfolk Waterside. From these selections, the top Hampton Roads business was chosen during state-wide Business Appreciation Week ceremonies.

"Nowhere else do more people work for small businesses than here in Hampton Roads," said guest speaker Barry E. DuVal, Virginia Secretary of Commerce and Trade. "Virginia is second in the nation in job growth."

Taylor Document has provided safe and secure document storage for the last 18 years.

"Taylor Document completely fills that need," said Norfolk Mayor Paul Fram. He noted that Taylor Document also controls and manages its costs, is debt-free, and has doubled profits each of the last two years. It also demonstrated its commitment to protecting the environment with an innovative paper recycling program.

As Taylor Document's representative, George Valos, received the winning plaque, he recognized that it really honored all the business. "I challenge you to be the best you can," said Valos. "Give back to the area with whatever you can. It's through our youth that the Tidewater area and the state are going to be able to produce what we need for the future."

Portsmouth honoree Way Back Yonder Antiques sells antiques, but Mayor James Holley III also cast the vote in the perspective of a "Main Street" business as a catalyst and anchor in the downtown district.

"Way Back Yonder's been wonderful for us," said Holley. "It has that sense of presence and ambience."

The co-owners Ed Forlines and Ken Woodward had worked hard to improve their business. They had recently had to close down temporarily for construction and were glad to be re-opened.

"I am honored to represent the Portsmouth family," said Forlines. "We want to thank all our customers for making us what we are."

Virginia Beach's honoree, Creative Gifts Galore, began in 1994 from a spare room in owner Debbie Mollura's home. Her success came from concentrating on core competencies and relationships.

Mayor Meyera Oberndorf noted that Mollura had built on 24 previous years of customer service with Bell Atlantic before going into her own business, in which there has been 27 percent growth per year.

"She has had 80 percent increase in sales over the first quarter of the previous year," added Oberndorf.

Mollura's service has been a way to help people and keep them happy. "There is a way of making people happy and businesses happy," Mollura said. "You have to recognize people for all occasions."

Chesapeake's Small Business of the Year Award went to a Maximum Controls, a company specializing in installation and maintenance of computerized industrial controls.

"In January 1995, the company received its first market order," said Mayor William Ward.

He noted its growth from a home-based operation to a staff of 15, eight of which are engineers. Receiving the award for his brother, John Warren, the company's president, was Brian Warren, marketing director.

voce A VINCULO MATRIMONI

at the end of the statutory period. It is ORDERED that Rebecca L. Hayes Blossom appear and protect her interest, on or before June 19, 2000, which date is no sooner than fifty days after entry of this order of publication.

And it is further ORDERED that this order of publication be published once a week for four successive weeks in Virginia Beach Sun, a newspaper of general circulation in this City prescribed by this court.

Public Notice

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

The Virginia Beach Planning Commission will hold a Public Hearing on Wednesday, June 14, 2000 at 12:00 Noon in the Council Chambers of the City Hall Building, Princess Anne Courthouse, Virginia Beach, Virginia. A briefing session will be held at 9:00 a.m. in the City Manager's Conference Room, City Hall Building. PLANNING COMMISSION ACTION IS NOT A FINAL DETERMINATION OF THE APPLICATION, BUT ONLY A RECOMMENDATION TO THE CITY COUNCIL AS THE VIEWPOINT OF THE PLANNING COMMISSION. FINAL DETERMINATION OF THE APPLICATION IS TO BE MADE BY THE CITY COUNCIL. AFTER PUBLIC NOTICE IN A NEWS-PAPER HAVING GENERAL CIRCULATION WITHIN THE CITY.

THOSE MEMBERS OF THE PUBLIC INTERESTED IN ATTENDING THE PUBLIC HEARING SHOULD BE ADVISED THAT, FOR REASONS THE PLANNING COMMISSION DEEMS APPROPRIATE, ITEMS LISTED ON THE AGENDA MAY BE HEARD OUT OF ORDER AND THAT IT SHOULD NOT BE ASSUMED THAT THE ORDER LISTED BELOW WILL BE EXACTLY FOLLOWED DURING THE PUBLIC HEARING.

The staff reviews of some or all of the items on this agenda suggest that certain conditions be attached to approval by City Council. However, it should not be assumed that those conditions constitute all the conditions that will ultimately be attached to the project. Staff agencies may impose further conditions and requirements during administration of applicable city ordinances.

WE KICK 400 KICKS TO SCHOOL EVERY DAY.

We have. To you. Just don't want to leave. They go to an extraordinary new kind of public school. It's called a Community School for Excellence.

It's open 15 hours a day, 6 days a week, 50 weeks a year. Like many schools in this program, it has medical and dental services and a social worker on site. Its extended hours are filled with unique academic and recreational activities. It's a school where teachers have more time to teach. And students are physically and emotionally better prepared to learn. So if you have trouble getting your kids to go to school, find out how you can make it a place they won't want to leave.

Talented Mr. Ridley joins select group

Virginia Beach resident Dennis Ridley has been named a "Master of Chiasmus" by the web site www.chiasmus.com.

Ridley, the director of institutional research and planning at Virginia Wesleyan College, is the first non-historical person to be honored with this designation.

Chiasmus is a literary device in which the order of words is reversed in parallel clauses, as in Mac West's "It's not the men in my life, it's the life in my men." Shakespeare's "Better a witty fool than a foolish wit," Churchill's "I've taken more out of alcohol than alcohol has taken out of me," and John F. Kennedy's immortal line, "Ask not what your country can do for you, ask what you can do for your country."

Boston psychologist Dr. Marly Grothe, founder of chiasmus.com and author of the book "Never Let A Fool Kiss You or a Kiss Fool You," said, "Many literary and historical greats have been extremely fond of chiasmus, using the device innumerable times in their works."

Since chiasmus.com was launched less than a year ago, eight luminaries have been featured on the site's "Masters of Chiasmus" page: JFK, Churchill, Shakespeare, Shaw, Wilde, Emerson, Benjamin Franklin and Dr. Samuel Johnson.

Grothe said, "My original intention was to honor only literary and historical figures, but several months ago, Dennis Ridley began entering exceptionally creative and thought-provoking examples of chiasmus in the site's monthly quotes competition. He has continued to do so month after month. I finally decided to honor him in this special way."

Ridley's creations range from the playful to the serious, including: "During the Year of the Rat, who was the Rat of the Year?"

"Many youthful men long for fame, and many famous men long for youth"

"Wishes were horses, beggars would ride. But if horses had wishes, riders would beg."

For more information about chiasmus, and for a few dozen Ridley creations, go the "Masters of Chiasmus" page of www.chiasmus.com.

Ridley, originally from Portland, Ore., has spent most of his career as a professor, researcher and administrator. He has been a word game aficionado for most of his life.

A graduate of Amherst College and the University of California at Santa Barbara, Dennis has published extensively in his fields of psychology and higher education research, and enjoys creative writing as well. Dennis and wife, Liane, a first-grade Reading Recovery teacher, live in Virginia Beach with 18-year-old daughter Janna, an aspiring ballerina.

Hikes, walks, Clean the Bay Day planned at First Landing

June is abounding with activities at First Landing State Park, 2500 Shore Dr. All programs are free and open to the public with parking fees. For more information, call 412-2306. June events include:

■ Thursday, June 1, Junior Ranger registration begins. Krieter Kids and Junior Rangers is an environmental education program designed for children. Meets throughout the summer and fall on a regular basis. Call 412-2306 for details.

■ Friday, June 2, crabbing, 7 to 9 p.m. Wear clothes that can get wet, old shoes or water sandals and have fun with Jerry Tobin and Mike Nickelsburg. They'll teach you how to crab with a baited line (available for a small fee in our park at the Bay Store). Children must be accompanied by an adult. Program is canceled in the event of rain. Meet at 7 p.m. in the amphitheater.

■ Saturday, June 3, National Trails Day, 9 a.m. to noon. National Trails Day celebrates trails and the volunteers who maintain them. Bring some friends to First Landing Trail Center to help with the trail maintenance or ask your co-workers to Adopt-A-Trail. Call 412-2306 for more information.

■ Saturday, June 3, bald cypress nature hike, 9 to 10 a.m. Enter an area of timeless beauty where little has changed since the 17th century. The mile and a half trail provides the perfect opportunity for a leisurely walk in the woods and exploration of the land as the first English settlers saw it. Meet at the Trail Center.

■ Saturday, June 3, night hike, 8 p.m. Join Bill McCord, volunteer interpreter, for an hour-long hike in the dark without the aid of a flashlight. Sensory awareness, nocturnal animals, and even a little park history will be key in this program. Meet after sunset at the Trail Center. Call 412-2306 to confirm time.

■ Sunday, June 4, osprey hike, 8:15 a.m. The Middlebrooks will guide you to see nesting osprey found in the park. Explore a maritime forest. Binoculars supplied or bring your own. Children welcome. Meet at the 64th Street, Narrows Beach Parking Lot.

■ Wednesday, June 7, sunset beach walk, 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. Discover the treasures of the beach while watching a beautiful sunset. Search and learn to identify a variety of beach creatures as you walk along the surf. Meet outside the Chesapeake Bay Visitor Center.

■ Thursday, June 8, In and Around First Landing, 7 to 8 p.m. Join Ernie Johnson as he shares his beautiful slides and stories about our park. Look forward to learning about the sites in the park, as well as some current history. Meet at the Trail Center Conference Room.

■ Friday, June 9, crabbing, 7 to 9 p.m. Wear clothes that can get wet, old shoes or water sandals and have fun with Jerry Tobin and Mike Nickelsburg. They'll teach you how to crab with a baited line (available for a small fee in our park at the Bay Store). Children must be accompanied by an adult. Program is canceled in the event of rain. Meet at 7 p.m. in the amphitheater.

■ Saturday, June 10, Clean the Bay Day, 9 a.m. to noon. Bring a group of friends and help save the sea by picking up debris from our beautiful Chesapeake Bay shore. Each year one individual tosses out over a ton of trash. Help us put trash where it belongs. Meet at the Chesapeake Bay Center Amphitheatre.

■ Sunday, June 11, Botanical Tour, 10 a.m. to noon. Meet with Volunteer Interpreter, Byron Babcock, for a look at plants native to the park. As we walk, we will discuss the relationships among plants species as well as the many roles that plants play in our own lives. Meets at the Trail Center.

■ Tuesday, June 13, Junior Ranger program registration deadline. Call 412-2306 for more details.

■ OpSail is coming to First Landing, June 14-15. Gather on the beach for a spectacular view of the tall ships, anchored along our beaches. We are planning several events which include Historical Impressions, a beach barbecue and more. The Parade of Sail officially begins off Fort Story at 8 a.m. on Friday, a formation that is approximately 10 to 12 miles long. Bring your beach chairs and cameras for a once-in-a-lifetime event.

■ Friday, June 16, crabbing, 7 to 9 p.m. Wear clothes that can get wet, old shoes or water sandals and have fun with Jerry Tobin and Mike Nickelsburg. They'll teach you how to crab with a baited line (available for a small fee in our park at the Bay Store). Children must be accompanied by an adult. Program is canceled in the event of rain. Meet at 7 p.m. in the amphitheater.

■ Saturday, June 17, Narrows nature walk, 8:15 a.m. The Middlebrooks will guide you to see nesting osprey found in the park. Explore a maritime forest. See the wonders of our wetlands. Maybe you'll catch some dolphins playing. Binoculars supplied or bring your own. Children welcome. Meet at the 64th Street, Narrows Beach Parking Lot.

■ Saturday, June 17, treasure hunt, 1 to 2 p.m. Join your child in a treasure hunt to discover the wonderful treasures in nature as you walk along our trails. Meet at the Trail Center for a fun, educational family activity. There might even be a pirate treasure at the end of the trail.

■ Saturday, June 7, night hike, 8 p.m. Join Bill McCord, volunteer interpreter, for an hour-long hike in the dark without the aid of a flashlight. Sensory awareness, nocturnal animals, and even a little park history will be key in this program. Meet after sunset at the Trail Center. Call 412-2306 to confirm time.

■ Sunday, June 18, morning beach walk, 9 to 10 a.m. Walk with friends, fly with the gulls, listen to the surf, feel the sand and revel in the magic of the sea. Learn about all the creatures who share our world. Meet outside the Chesapeake Bay Visitor Center.

■ Tuesday, June 20, Junior Ranger program begins. Call 412-2306 for more details.

■ Wednesday, June 21, sunset beach walk, 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. Discover the treasures of the beach while watching a beautiful sunset. Search and learn to identify a variety of beach creatures as you walk along the surf. Meet outside the Chesapeake Bay Visitor Center.

■ Thursday, June 22, In and Around First Landing, 7 to 8 p.m. Join Ernie Johnson as he shares his beautiful slides and stories about our park. Look forward to learning about the sites in the park, as well as some current history. Meet at the Trail Center Conference Room.

■ Friday, June 23, crabbing, 7 to 9 p.m. Wear clothes that can get wet, old shoes or water sandals and have fun with Jerry Tobin and Mike Nickelsburg. They'll teach you how to crab with a baited line (available for a small fee in our park at the Bay Store). Children must be accompanied by an adult. Program is canceled in the event of rain. Meet at 7 p.m. in the amphitheater.

■ Saturday, June 24, Trail Maintenance Day, 9 a.m. to noon. Take pride in your park. Come work the trails, meet new friends and have fun. All ages and groups welcome; there is something for everybody to do to keep our park healthy. Call 412-2306.

■ Saturday, June 24, Music in the Park, 7 to 9 p.m. Bernard Farrell plays the violin and fiddles his way into your heart. Bring your lawn chair and expect to have a special night of music. Gather at our Gazebo (behind the Chesapeake Bay Visitor Center). To cover our cost of this special program, a small fee will be required. Call 412-2306.

■ Sunday, June 25, botanical tour, 10 a.m. to noon. Meet with Volunteer Interpreter, Byron Babcock, for a look at plants native to the park. As we walk, we will discuss the relationships among plants species as well as the many roles that plants play in our own lives. Meets at the Trail Center.

■ Wednesday, June 28, sunset beach walk, 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. Discover the treasures of the beach while watching a beautiful sunset. Search and learn to identify a variety of beach creatures as you walk along the surf. Meet outside the Chesapeake Bay Visitor Center.

■ Tuesday, June 27, Junior Ranger program meets. Call 412-2306 for more details.

■ Friday, June 30, crabbing, 7 p.m. Great program for families and anyone interested in learning how to crab with a baited line. All children must be accompanied by an adult. Line and bait can be purchased for a small fee from our park store, nets will be provided, or you may bring your own.
